Organizer Slain By Mine Guards, Union Charges

Harlan Coal Operators Ordering Hundreds Fired, Wire Says.

Sheriff Offered Hush Money After Assault, Kentuckian Claims.

By Sidney Olson.

A union organizer was murdered in Harlan County last Saturday by four mine guards, hired by coal operators who returned to Harlan last week after testifying before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, representatives of the United Mine Workers charged yesterday.

The organizer, Lloyd Clouse, was killed; his brother, Jasper Clouse, was "fired and beaten up," and hundreds of newly unionized mine workers have been discharged by the operators in the last week in a "showdown fight," Harlan representatives of the union asserted to William Turnblazer, district chief, in a telegram which he presented to Committee Chairman Robert M. La Follette, jr., yesterday.

The telegram urged that Pearl Bassham, R. E. Lawson and Mrs. H. Bennett, coal operators, be resummoned before the committee. Lawson and Bassham told the committee last week conditions in Harlan had been "greatly exaggerated," and that "it's really a nice place to live."

Bassham Accused.

The wire charged Bassham, a small, mild, baldish man, on his return, hired 28 union men in one mine and closed down another where 120 of the 150 employes had joined the union. Bassham testified previously of his surprise at being told of the Wagner labor relations act, guaranteeing collective bargaining, on his arrival in Washington.

The wire was the climax to a sensational day of testimony before a gasping crowd that jammed the small hearing room.

Most dramatic of the day's incidents came when Hugh Taylor, a former Harlan deputy, took the stand.

The bones of his face set grimly, his two bullet-shattered hands lifted for all to see, Taylor swore before the committee that High Sheriff Theodore R. Middleton, of Harlan County, had offered him "$2,000 and a new automobile" if he would hide out in another county until the present investigation "died down."

The offer came, Taylor said, while he was convalescing in a Pineville, Ky., hospital, after what he charged was an attempt by two of Middleton's deputies to murder him.

The hawk-faced mountain man, his drawl quickened by emotion, told of going to the Harlan County courthouse the day the grand jury met to investigate the killing of Bennett Musick February 20. He said Frank White, a deputy, ordered him to go home.

"I got down the road a little piece," he said. "Then I heard a horn tootin' and I stopped. Davey Sullenberger was with me in my car. White came around to my side of the car and said, 'Where you goin', Taylor?' I said I was goin' home.

Shot in Back by Deputy.

"'Like hell you are,' said Frank, and pulled out his pistol and popped it against the side of my head. I grabbed it with my left hand as he started pourin' the fire at me."

The witness held up his left hand, twisted and maimed by wounds newly healed, one finger missing, the rest stiff and useless.

"Then I grabbed the pistol with my right hand and he let me have it through there," Taylor's right hand has a long deep scar through the palm-heel and into the wrist. "The door of my car fell open and White started to run up the road. I had two .45's on me and I reached for them but couldn't do anything with my guns. I didn't have no hands.

"When I seen I was helpless, I started to run."

"White heard me a-runnin' and turned around then and shot me in the back. I fell over in a ditch by the road, bleedin' right much, and I laid there like a possum.

"I could hear them (he had named White, another deputy, Wash Irwin, and an unknown man as the assailants) coming, so I figured they was

France Urged To Take Control Of Railroads

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 28.—The French Government proposed today to take over control of the nation's debt-burdened railroads and put them back on a sound basis by boosting freight rates from 10 to 15 per cent.

Finance Minister Vincent Auriol told the finance committee of the Chamber of Deputies the railways owe the state 25,000,000,000 francs, (about $1,115,000,000) and have a joint capitalization of only 8,000,000,000 francs (approximately $356,800,000.)

He "suggested" the Government merge all lines into a single company with the state owning 80 per cent of the stock.

Twenty-six thousand miles of railways would be controlled by the government under the plan. The state now operates two lines, one serving the northwest part of France, the other Alsace-Lorraine, covering 6,971 miles of trackage.

Railroad deficits have been included in national budgets, having been paid for years by the government.

The rail systems were co-ordinated shortly after the war and a central fund created into which they were to pay profits and out of which deficits were to be paid. Subsequent economic collapse and loss of world trade caused revenue declines and the railways continued to issue bonds.

Under the co-ordination, the government required that rates be kept down to promote trade. Pressure from labor interests compelled modernization of systems. With the resultant increase of indebtedness.

All private railroads in France are operated under 99-year state leases, which expire between 1950 and 1960.

Under government ownership, passenger fares would remain as at present.

Auriol, in disclosing the rail nationalization plan, said the government would follow the same policies as adopted for acquisition of control of arms and munitions factories.

Answering repeated demands of the General Confederation of Labor for financing of a big public works program, Auriol told the finance committee the government would refuse to float a long term loan.

He declared such a loan would carry a mortal blow to laboring classes because it was certain to fail.

Auriol said the condition of the French treasury proved the nation was awaiting no financial catastrophe. He attributed such fears to recent weakness on the bourse.

The minister pledged the government not to permit the franc to slip lower than 22.56 to the dollar, which it touched April 22. The legal limit under the tripartite pact with the United States and Great Britain is 22.96.

6 Are Saved From Flood In 2 Rescues

3 Workmen Rescued From River When Skiff Overturns.

Well past its crest, the muddy Potomac River roared toward Chesapeake Bay last night, leaving behind it the death and damage of 1937's flood.

Results of the high water, which was less destructive this year than last, were:

One Maryland man dead.

Three snatched from death in the river last night.

The bodies of two girls, killed when their automobile plunged through a bridge at Orange, Va., recovered.

Farmer, 60, Drowns.

Enoch Jenkins, 60-year-old Montgomery County, Md., farmer, was drowned in the surging waters near his home at Whites Ferry, 20 miles west of Rockville.

With a son, Richard, 19, and Ronald Athey, 22, of Luckett, Va., Jenkins was attempting to rescue 75 sheep from the flood waters. His wife and eight other children already had been removed from their island home.

A small motor launch on which the men were working broke its moorings and spun down the river. Richard Jenkins and Athey leaped to safety and clung to a tree branch until rescued early yesterday by the Rockville rescue squad. They saw the elderly Jenkins fall into the water as the boat capsized several yards downstream.

A District policeman, J. A. Burgess, of the First Precinct, and John Gray, 16, of Friendship Heights, Md., were rescued early today from a tree top in the flood area near River Bend in Fairfax County, Va.

Boat Capsizes.

The rescue was effected by Marvin Poole and Marshall Dailey, members of the McLean Fire Department, and Deputy Sheriff Henry T. Magarity, who rowed a small boat out into the strong current, got the pair and brought them safely to shore. Although the tree was only about 500 feet from the present shore, three hours were needed to reach the tree and then land safely.

Gray and a friend, Herbert Buckley, 16, of the 5000 block of Wisconsin avenue northwest, originally were marooned in the tree when they went to an island to look for the Gray boy's horse. They couldn't find the horse, and on their return their boat was capsized. They grabbed on to the tree limbs.

Three Saved From Death.

That happened about noon. At dusk Julius Gebicks and Bus Pullman came down to look at the river and heard their cries. Policeman Burgess was called and he set out to rescue the pair in his canoe. Burgess made one trip successfully, bringing Buckley back, but when he went for Gray the canoe tipped and he was stranded in the same tree.

Three men were rescued from drowning in the flood waters late last night when a skiff in which they were returning from work capsized at the foot of Water and Eighth streets, about 15 feet from shore. They were rescued by two young boys, who refused to give their names, and a man named Campbell, whose first name Harbor Police could not learn.

The three men, William T. Bowen, 40, Wilmer V. Jenkins, 38, and William C. Day, 36, all of Takoma

Edward May Wed Day His Brother Is Crowned King

By the Associated Press.

London, April 28.—The possibility arose today that Wallis Warfield Simpson might marry the Duke of Windsor on Coronation Day, May 12, the day Edward's successor is crowned in Westminster Abbey.

A Southampton newspaper said it learned "exclusively from most reliable sources" that a Coronation Day wedding was being considered.

No definite decision has been reached on the matter, the newspaper declared.

Magistrate Upholds Whipping at School

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 28.—Declaring that order must be maintained in public schools even if it means use of corporal punishment, Magistrate Walter E. Sinn tonight acquitted James C. Skidmore, principal of the Burkittsville School, of a charge of assault and battery preferred by the parents of a pupil who was recently whipped.

A packed court room heard Charles E. Younkins, the 11-year-old prosecuting witness, and his father tell of bruises left by the principal's paddle.

Budget Reserve Scheme Given Roosevelt's Aid

Taber Says 'Adjustable' 15% Cut Would Not Bring Saving.

President Roosevelt's approval yesterday was thrown behind the House leadership plan to impound 15 per cent of next year's appropriations, as Republicans opened an attack on the proposal's "discretionary" features.

"It would not result in any saving whatsoever," Representative John Taber (Republican), of New York, told the House in demanding a "mandatory" slash.

Under the 15 per cent "adjustable cut" plan, the President would have authority to make restorations up to the full amount of the cut, wherever he deemed it necessary.

Support Disclosed.

Representative Clarence Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, sponsor of the plan, would carry the economy campaign into every Government department, and virtually guarantee "a layman's balance of the budget."

"We don't intend to talk about this economy," said Cannon. "We intend to do it."

President Roosevelt's support of the plan, understood to have been drafted by the Budget Bureau, was disclosed yesterday by Speaker Bankhead.

"I think the Cannon proposal to impound funds meets with the President's approval," said Bankhead.

"The Administration hopes to make very appreciable savings. Frankly, if the Cannon proposal goes through it leaves it up to the President what savings he can make. I don't think any further immediate action would be necessary."

Bankhead said it would be "practically impossible" to provide for a 10 per cent horizontal cut in appropriations, as suggested by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

Byrnes, first to propose a general slash, was silent yesterday, but is expected to make a statement today. His plan, like the Cannon proposal, would have exempted fixed charges and contractural obligations. While the Cannon plan permits the President to restore the cut wherever he wishes, the Byrnes plan permits him only to make transfers of appropriations within departments.

No Salary Slashes.

Cannon announced yesterday that his plan would make no salary cuts, or affect any appropriations guaranteed by statutes. He admitted this did not mean that there would not be some reductions in personnel, at the discretion of the President.

"A beneficial effect would be," said Cannon, "that every Government department would be made economy minded. Having no foreknowledge that any part of the cut would be restored, the departments would have to work out a plan for applying the cuts. Where these would work hardships, the President could make restoration.

Despite the drive to economize, the House yesterday added $4,000,000 to the Tennessee Valley Authority's appropriation carried in the second deficiency bill.

The House then passed the $83,146,943 appropriation measure without a record vote. But even with the increase, the second deficiency bill was $14,060,000 under budget estimates.

Signs Navy Bill.

Meanwhile, the President signed the $516,000,000 Navy appropriations bill, peacetime second only to the current $528,000,000 Navy appropriations.

Senator Byrnes has considerable support in the Senate for his 10 per cent horizontal cut plan, and an attempt may be made on the Senate side to substitute the Byrnes program, because of its mandatory features. Such a move may encounter rough sledding because of the President's apparent preference for the House discretionary proposal. The backing of Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, Senate Appropriations chairman, may aid the South Carolinian.

In the House yesterday, Repre-

Boom Fears Behind New Fiscal Policy

This dread is back of the rapid development of Federal fiscal policy in the last few weeks, it became clear last night when an unpublished lecture delivered April 3 at the University of North Carolina by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace came to light.

To combat the boom trend, it was indicated, the Administration expects to extend Governmental control of industry and to regulate taxation and spending so as to avoid excessive corporate and individual savings.

Would Aid "Bottom Third."

A second major aim of tax and expenditure control is to put continuously increasing purchasing power in the hands of the "bottom one-third" of the population.

In recent weeks, the Administration has:

Initiated a campaign against monopoly.

Attempted to hold down rising prices.

Hinted at tax revision at the next session of Congress.

The implications of the philosophy enunciated by Wallace at Chapel Hill pointed definitely toward increased rather than reduced taxation of corporate and individual incomes as national income goes up. It was indicated strongly in other official circles that this is the view shared substantially by the White House, the Treasury, the Federal Reserve Board and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The purpose is to prevent uneven piling up of savings which would go into investment, plant expansion and speeding up of durable goods industries. The result of such a trend, in this official view, would be another depression through inability of the country to sustain so suddenly expanded a production machine.

U. S. Would Get Excess.

Under the program, excess private savings would go to the Government for expenditure in such a way as to promote long-time stability. This, in turn, is interpreted to mean a reduction in the public debt, but also Government spending to increase the purchasing power of those of limited means.

"There seems to be a tendency for a boom and a crash to come about once every ten years," he said. "If 1919 produced a 1921, and 1929 produced a 1932, we cannot help asking as to the possibilities of a 1939 producing a 1942."

If business, labor and agriculture are left to themselves, another boom and depression very likely lies ahead, Wallace declared. Government must step in to prevent as well as salvage wreckage, he said, urging that the Government power to tax and to spend be used to promote economic stability.

Adopting a prediction that the national income would swell to at least $80,000,000,000 by 1940, he said: "It now appears that most of the great corporations and many private individuals will make large profits and savings in the years ahead. In the past, excess savings have resulted the following year in great activity in the building of factories, the extension of telephone lines, the repairing of railroad facilities, etc."

Suggests High Taxation.

"For example, there was a great increase in savings as compared with the preceding year in 1919, 1922, 1925 and 1928. One year later, or in other words in the years 1920, 1923, 1926 and 1929, there was unusual expansion in the heavy or durable goods industries. And one year later, or in other words in 1921, 1924, 1927 and 1930, there was business recession."

Sudden increases in savings produced trouble two years later, Wallace argued. "I have no knowledge of the attitude of the Treasury Department on this matter," he said, "but it would seem that if taxation is to contribute the utmost to the general welfare over a period of years, it would be wise to have taxation high enough so that savings

Court Plan Opponents Take Lead of 10 to 8 As Three Speak Out

Industrial Board Chief Says 'Pilates' Back of 'Revolution.'

By William V. Nessly.

The first open attack on New Deal policies and philosophies at the current annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States came yesterday from Virgil Jordan, president of the National Industrial Conference Board, Inc., of New York.

"Jesting Pilates of politics," "demagoguery," "falsehood" and "mass delusion" were terms he used in assailing the "alien forces" back of the "revolution" in America, as delegates applauded him and rushed for hundreds of copies of his speech.

Meanwhile there were other developments at the chamber's twenty-fifth anniversary session:

George V. McLaughlin, president, Brooklyn Trust Co., said he did not "envy the position the Treasury finds itself in" as a result of its gold policy, and warned that maintaining artificially low interest rates implies maintenance of an "oversize" credit base that may bring excessive credit expansion.

Lionel D. Edie, economist, of New York, on the other hand, held that present inflation controls are adequate and predicted that a revolt against the rising cost of living will result in pressure that will curb price increases.

Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, warned business not to "call in the lawyers" again to try to avoid or nullify rights granted to labor by the Wagner act, but advised them to trust leaders of labor before demanding incorporation of unions.

P. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., of Akron, called for co-operation be-

McCarran, O'Mahoney Hatch Committed Against Bill.

Change or Hostile Report Is Forecast

Administration's Hopes Shift to Evenly Divided Senate.

By Robert C. Albright.

Opponents of the President's court plan gained a majority of the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday, as three pivotal members spoke out in flat opposition to a six-judge increase.

The new opposition was voiced from the previously "non-committal" throats of Senators Pat McCarran, of Nevada; Joseph O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Carl Hatch, of New Mexico, all Democrats.

Yesterday's first "on the record" expression of their views shifted the committee line-up to a majority of at least 10 to 8 against the President's original court bill.

Each of the ten claimed by the opposition is now "committed." Two of the eight belived for the bill are still classed as "non-committal."

Compromise Assured.

A committee "compromise" on the court plan, or a definitely hostile report on the original bill, was believed assured by the development. This shifted the Administration's hopes to the Senate floor, now evenly divided on the plan. As a last resort to preserve the six-judge increase, the Administration still looks to the House, claiming a majority there of "from 50 to 100" for the bill.

Although hearings have terminated the Senate committee plans three more weeks of closed debate. Early yesterday a motion was adopted to vote on all amendments and on the bill on May 18. Reinforced by the new committee support, the opposition may attempt a showdown sooner.

As committee sentiment swung definitely against the six-judge increase, Chairman Henry F. Ashurst released copies of a letter written in support of the plan by Solicitor General Stanley Reed.

The Reed letter, submitted at request of Chairman Ashurst, denied that the Solicitor General's annual report of 1936 which asserted the Supreme Court was abreast of its docket, is inconsistent with the President's court message.

Supporting the increase, Reed said "that with a broader distribution of the task of preparing opinions and a consequent lessening of the pressure upon members of the court in keeping abreast of the docket, there will be greater opportunity for deliberation, for full investigation, and for comprehensive exposition in the decision of cases."

McCarran Moves First.

The break in the committee's non-committal ranks started yesterday when Senator McCarran announced he would oppose increasing the court "at one fell swoop by six members, because I think it is not in keeping with the spirit of our organic law."

McCarran is the author of a so-called "compromise" amendment to increase the court by two, with a fixed membership of 11, without regard to age or retirement.

The Nevadan said the court should not be "remolded" to the will of either the executive or legislative branches.

"While the Supreme Court and every other court which interprets the law should at all times keep abreast of the law and therefore be progressive," said McCarran, "it is not for any other branch of the government to say it should reform its views to carry out the will of the other branch.

"For that reason, I am opposed and will continue to oppose the President's bill, because it is in my judgment destructive of the confidence the people have and should have in their court of last resort."

Senator O'Mahoney, one of the most active participants in committee hearings, but withholding until yesterday his personal views, said he had "heard nothing to date which has convinced me that any increase of the court is either necessary or desirable."

O'Mahoney has favored a constitutional amendment requiring a 7-to-2 majority of the court to invalidate acts of Congress.

If the court is abreast of its work, the only justification for enlarging the court that can be offered,

Basques Flee As Vital Town Falls to Rebels

By the Associated Press.

Vitorio, Northern Spain, April 28. The insurgent armies driving toward Bilbao announced tonight they had captured Durango, keystone of the Basque capital's defensive system, and smashed the Basque resistance along a 60-mile front.

In officially announcing seizure of Durango, the headquarters here of Gen. Franco's northern armies said defenders of the dwindling Basque state were "completely demoralized" and were fleeing in disorder toward Bilbao.

Leftists Use Tanks.

Durango was taken by an encircling movement by insurgent columns. There was bitter hand-to-hand fighting before the defense suddenly crumpled.

Five thousand Basques and government troops with 20 tanks made the last stand in Durango, the insurgents said. Their retirement toward Bilbao, 16 miles northwest by a downhill highway, was described as "a great rout."

Many prisoners were reported taken.

North of Durango the forces of Insurgent Gen. Emilio Mola swept westward on a 15-mile front, capturing several towns extending to the region of Lequeitio on the Bay of Biscay coast. Four tactically important mountains were gained in this phase of the advance.

Grenades and Bayonets.

Insurgent officers estimated the defenders of Bilbao had lost more than 10,000 killed, wounded or captured.

The insurgent right wing was reported pressing on Guernica, 8 miles north of Durango. At nightfall the advance had carried them to within half a mile of Guernica, which the insurgents said had been dynamited and burned by the fleeing garrison.

(The Basques charged Guernica was destroyed yesterday and 800 civilians killed there in an insurgent aerial bombardment.)

The last battle for Durango was described as having begun with

House Blocks $500,000 Sum For Memorial

Action Will Delay Work at Basin Site; Total Cost Over $7,000,000.

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday withheld the requested $500,000 to begin construction on the Thomas Jefferson Memorial as planned by the Boylan Commission.

The committee's failure to act brings a further delay in breaking ground for the disputed memorial. Its action was made public when the deficiency bill was reported with the enabling sum missing.

At the same time it was revealed that the memorial would cost from $7,000,000 to $9,000,000.

Remodeling Expensive.

The National Park Service engineer in charge of the program, John L. Nagle, estimated $3,000,000 would cover the memorial proper, but remodeling of the Tidal Basin, building new roads and other incidentals would cost $4,500,000 to $6,500,000.

Congress last year authorized $3,000,000 for the project, but the only appropriation made to date is $30,000 to pay for preliminary plans.

Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, acting chairman of the Appropriations sub-committee which drafted the deficiency bill, explained the memorial item was not considered and no hearings held on it. It was sidetracked along with numerous other public building projects and may be taken up later, he said.

The committee, of which Boylan is a member, will open hearings soon on the third deficiency bill—the one reported yesterday was the second of this session—and it is possible consideration will be given the monument sum at that time, according to Woodrum.

Three Speakers Heard.

In its third day of hearings on proposed legislation seeking to reopen the "closed book" of the Boylan commission, which decided upon the site architect and design without holding public hearings, the House Library Committee yesterday heard:

Representative Karl Stefan (Republican), of Nebraska plead

Cleanup Has Just Started, Nazi Press Warns Catholics

By the Associated Press.

Berlin (Thursday), April 29.—The Nazi press early today displayed prominently a warning that the clean-up campaign against alleged immorality in Catholic institutions scarcely had begun.

The Berliner Lokalanzeiger asserted "approximately 1,000" lay brothers and also many priests are under arrest in additic to those sentenced in recent days.

The warning came on the heels of sentences meted out yesterday to three German Catholic chaplains on charges they attempted to organize a Catholic-Communist front against Nazidom and to three Catholic brothers on immorality charges.

The Lokalanzeiger said the Catholic Church was given every opportunity to clean house" but failed. Therefore, the National Socialist state had to intervene.

The newspaper cited the Pope's recent encyclical in declaring the Vatican persisted in treating the trials as persecution. It continued that if the Church continued to label them as persecution "one such trial will be broadcast over all German radio stations."

"Churches and Cloisters Sink to Level of Dens of Vice."

Summarizing conditions in Germany under Catholic Chancellor Dr. Heinrich Bruening, the newspaper charged monasteries became "breeding grounds" of immorality—breeding grounds which now will be "ruthlessly cleaned up with a rough fist and a strong broom."

Of the sentenced chaplains, the

Miss Earhart May Pilot First Lady Across Continent

Amelia Earhart may pilot Mrs. Roosevelt across the continent to Seattle when she goes to pay a "purely private and informal" visit to her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger.

The First Lady, however, at her press conference yesterday, refused details of the visit.

Miss Earhart is believed to have had luncheon at the White House yesterday. She said she was flying to the West Coast, then added hastily:

"But I am not going to Seattle."

World Markets Break Sharply in Selling Rush; Steel Leads Stock Tumble on N. Y. Exchange

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—A selling rush permeated world markets today and stock and commodity prices tumbled on what was described as bearish news from Washington and abroad.

In New York, London and Paris, speculators liquidated security holdings to meet commitments in commodities, hard hit by two weeks or more of declining prices.

Stocks here fell $1 to $7 a share or more and virtually all commodities were lower. Corporation bonds were lower, but U. S. Government obligations gained on Federal economy prospects.

As the liquidation proceeded, foreign exchanges were higher against the dollar, sterling slightly and the franc sharply. A total of $21,603,000 in gold was engaged in London for shipment to New York.

The break in stocks was apparent from the opening of the market. Brokers said the President's new warning against "the present hazard of undue advance in prices," and his advice to the public to stay out of speculation, had induced clearing of commitments by many traders.

Selling of American stocks from abroad was again a factor of importance, they asserted. A number of foreign firms, badly squeezed by the fall in commodities, were forced to liquidate here to obtain money for settlement.

One small private American bank in Paris, Cudebec & Co., was forced into the hands of a "friendly" liquidator. Rumors in London that 20 houses were in trouble were scorned in authoritative circles in London and New York.

Among the commodities, rubber was the hardest hit, some futures contracts losing as much as 1 2-3 cents a pound. At the finish the May position was quoted at 20.70 cents a pound, nearly 7 cents under the peak of the bull market reached early in April.

Cotton sold off by from 80 cents to $1.50 a bale, affected by the slump in stocks and a disappointing performance at Liverpool, while export copper picked up a small fraction of a cent a pound, copper futures were .14 to .23 of a cent lower, and wool tops, coffee, cocoa, raw silk, hides and cottonseed oil futures dropped moderately.

At Chicago reports of scarcity in corn sent that staple higher and the entire grain market improved in sympathy.

Selling was predominant throughout today's session of the New York Stock Exchange. Steel shares led in the downward movement, but all departments were affected.

Roosevelt Sped Across Georgia On Fishing Trip

Train on Schedule Despite Delayed Start; Sun Greets Party.

By the Associated Press.

On Board Roosevelt Train En Route to New Orleans, April 28.—Maintaining schedule despite a five-hour delay in starting from Washington, the eight-car special train carrying President Roosevelt on his Gulf Coast fishing vacation headed across Georgia and Alabama tonight for its first stop at Biloxi, Miss.

White House aides explained the 6 a. m. departure from the National Capital instead of 1 a. m. as first planned was due to a desire to avoid a five-hour layover on some siding on the way which the slow schedule called for. The switch in arrangements, they said, caused no interruption in schedules and also afforded the President more opportunity to rest.

A warm sun, contrasting sharply with the three days of constant rain in Washington, greeted the Presidential special as it sped by the pine and blossoming dogwood bordered right of way in southern Virginia.

But the day turned cloudy and cool as it crossed the Carolinas and headed for Atlanta for an operating stop.

Looking out of his private car window at the rear of the train, the Chief Executive saw a green countryside dotted with tobacco-drying barns and storage houses, fruit trees well into the blossoming stage, and rolling wooded hills.

At Biloxi, Miss., tomorrow morning he will detrain and motor along the Gulf Coast about 12 miles to Gulfport, viewing en route the former home of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy.

Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, and George E. Allen, native Mississippian, now on the board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, who were riding on the special, will leave the party at Gulfport.

The President is due to embark on the U. S. S. Potomac late tomorrow at New Orleans, and then, with a destroyer escort, go down the Mississippi to start his ten-day tarpon cruise.

Detective Listened At Keyhole to Get Cullinan Suit Data

How he got information by listening at the keyhole of a room occupied by the husband of Mrs. Hallie Cullinan, of Washington, in a Detroit hotel was described in a Dearborn County court yesterday by Herbert S. Hawkins, a private detective.

Hawkins appeared as a witness for Mrs. Cullinan in her $100,000 alienation of affections suit against Laura Strittmatter, stenographer. Hawkins overheard a conversation between Cullinan, a former Home Owners' Loan Corporation accountant, and Miss Strittmatter, he said.

The pair had been married, the court was told, but the marriage was annulled because Cullinan already had a wife.

In court Miss Strittmatter denied she knew of any previous marriage, but Mrs. Cullinan insisted she knew about it, and fed Cullinan narcotics to keep him under control. The suit was one of the last "heart balm" cases filed before such actions were outlawed in Michigan.

P. U. C. Cites Need For Cab Insurance

The need for compulsory liability insurance on all taxicabs was cited yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission, members of which supported Representative Charles D. Millard (Republican), of New York, in his campaign for legislation requiring such insurance.

Both Riley E. Elgen, chairman, and Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman, said they hoped Millard would "press" for the legislation.

Representative Millard took up the cause after six children from Bedford Village, N. Y., were injured here in a taxicab about a month ago. An attempt to place the hospital expense on the driver of the cab revealed that the driver did not own the cab and had no insurance or other resources.

Baltimore Banker Indicted on Funds

Baltimore, April 28 (AP).—The Grand jury indicted Walter Post Duvall, elderly Assistant Treasurer of the Mercantile Trust Co., on 21 counts today, charging larceny of $47,500 in company funds.

Another indictment charged Duvall with falsifying his books to the extent of $47,500. Duvall's service with the bank, which announced it was fully covered by surety bonds, totaled 38 years. State's Attorney J. Bernard wells said Duvall would be tried May 4 in Criminal Court.

President Turns Thumbs Down on Unemployed Census; Holds It Will Serve No Purpose.

By Franklyn Waltman

DESPITE the fact that several of the Administration's experts on unemployment—Harry Hopkins, not included—believe that a census of the unemployed would have substantial value in dealing with this all-important problem, President Roosevelt at his last press conference firmly turned thumbs down on such an undertaking.

WALTMAN.

Maintaining his opposition to proposals for a census of the unemployed, Mr. Roosevelt rejected the suggestion that the regular decennial census scheduled for 1940 be moved up to next year and that a count be made both of the jobless as well as those gainfully employed—along with such illuminating facts as age, occupation, period of unemployment, previous experience, family relationships and so forth. Under this plan the Government would not be put to any cost beyond the amount which must be expended anyway in 1940.

What does anyone want with such information? the President demanded to know. Federal agencies such as the WPA and the United States Employment Service, already know approximately the number of unemployed, he asserted. What difference does it make anyway, whether the unemployed total five, six or eight million, exclaimed Mr. Roosevelt. The country was aware of the seriousness of the unemployment problem, and, anyway, would someone please define an unemployed person for him, the President asserted.

There were no answers forthcoming in the press conference but that should not be construed as meaning that there are no answers to the President's questions. It is not the function of newspaper correspondents to answer rhetorical questions at a press conference or engage in an argument with the President. It is their business to ask questions and Mr. Roosevelt's right to answer them, or to evade them by asking other questions, as he sees fit.

Too much importance, of course, can be attached to a census of the unemployed. It is not absolutely essential and the problem is in no way diminished merely by making a count of the jobless and establishing their case histories. But it is to go to the other extreme to contend that such a canvass would be without value.

In the first place, unemployment is the Nation's foremost problem. It is the heart of most of our difficulties. During the depression years it has cost the Nation, in the form of relief disbursements alone, some $10,000,000,000. Despite the progress made toward recovery, relief costs have not greatly decreased. The President has asked an appropriation of $1,500,000,000 for next year on that account and in all probability sizable relief expenditures by the Federal Government will be necessary for several years to come.

And we do not know very much about the problem facing us. Ask the best informed labor statisticians in the Government the number of unemployed, and they will tell you that no one knows. They can tell you the number on WPA rolls—which was 2,553,859 on March 25; they can tell you that there are about 6,000,000 jobless registered with the United States Employment Service offices; they can tell you how many more persons are employed in the industries surveyed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in March, as compared with March a year ago—the figure is 1,600,000; they will point to the apparently inflated unemployment figures of the American Federation of Labor and the smaller figures of the Industrial Conference Board—but they cannot tell you the actual number of unemployed.

It is true that by itself such a figure would not mean a great deal, but it "would provide a base line in terms of an actual count of employed and unemployed in various occupational and industrial groups, against which the changing trends reflected in employment office registrations and placements may be measured and evaluated," as the United States Employment Service has just pointed out in a new publication entitled "Who Are the Job Seekers?" And in taking such a census there is no great difficulty in classifying those totally unemployed and desirous of full-time work; those having part-time employment, but seeking full-time work; those who wish only part-time work or those working but able and desirous of handling better jobs.

Excellent though the job is which the U. S. Employment Service has done in tabulating information about those in its active registration files in "Who Are the Job Seekers," that agency at the outset of this publication frankly asserts that "the total number of persons unemployed is not known."

In the absence of a census of the jobless, this study is, perhaps, the most valuable information we have regarding the unemployment problem. The Employment Service files encompass most of those on relief rolls and thus present a far more complete picture than can come from the WPA rolls. Yet the tabulations just published are as of July 1 last.

On that date the Employment Services had 6,619,891 active applications for work, 1,172,088 fewer than in December, 1935. Of the July total 5,299,702 were men and 1,320,189 were women. Of the total 53 per cent, or 3,507,484, were eligible for relief. Classified as to major occupational groups these seeking work through the U. S. Employment Service offices included 257,256 professional and kindred workers; 231,184 sales persons; 437,301 clerical workers; 1,026,970 service workers; 1,244,966 skilled craftsmen; 1,523,959 semi-skilled production workers; 1,548,271 unskilled laborers and 349,984 unclassified workers.

The study breaks down these classifications into more specific occupations, pointing out, incidentally, that a greater proportion of jobs were found for skilled craftsmen than others between the two comparative dates as a result of advances in construction and building. Another tabulation examined the ages of these jobseekers, resulting in the finding that "the proportion of registrants between the ages of 25 and 45 is somewhat smaller than the proportion of gainfully employed within that age range" which is held to suggest "steadier employment for these persons and greater ease in securing jobs when they become unemployed."

This, perhaps, was to be expected, but it is surprising that the Employment Service found that "the greatest excess of Employment Service applicants as compared with the gainfully employed among the men is in the younger age group—those under 25 years of age." This finding is surprising because it means that the jobless under 25 years represent a more pressing problem than even that of the unemployed persons over 45 years old. Incidentally, the placement rates for women under 25 years old are much better than for young men.

The reason why men under 25 are at a discount is that as long as there is a surplus of labor, employers give preference to trained and experienced men. As business expands and labor shortages develop in certain fields the prospects for these youths will increase—but, nevertheless, they are at a distinct disadvantage and, pushed by younger brothers, may become in truth a "lost generation" without training and experience. In July the Employment Service had applications from 1,583,280 persons under 25 years—1,145,905 of them men, or 21.6 per cent of the men jobseekers registered. How many more young men there are out of work and living on parents remains unknown.

Something should be done for this group if they are not to become "a lost generation." The ascertainment of the circumstances of this group alone indicates the value of a census of the jobless and would supply essential information for a constructive and sound program of action.

Caracas, Venezuela, April 28 (AP). The airmail plane Venezolana, missing since Friday, was reported tonight to have been found near the Cuyuni River.

The report said one passenger and the pilot were injured and left with the plane by the other passenger, the co-pilot and the wireless operator who made their way to El Dorado.

Fredric D. Grab, commercial attache of the United States legation in Caracas, and William Armstrong Perry, an American newspapermar., were the passengers. The report did not state which passenger was injured and left with the plane.

Anti-Trust Law Strong Enough, Borah Asserts

Government Has Power But Lacks Will to Enforce, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, longtime campaigner against monopolies, took issue last night with Attorney General Cummings' report to the President that the anti-trust laws are weak.

Contending it is within the power of the Administration to end monopoly, he said in a formal statement:

"It may be that some amendments to the law are desirable, but I think there is a vast amount of power in the law which has never been used. The trouble has not been the want of law but the want of purpose."

The statement of the "Lion of Idaho" did not mention Cummings by name, but it followed by only a day the Attorney General's report that he had found insufficient evidence of collusive bidding to justify a prosecution against steel companies and that a revision of the anti-trust statutes is needed.

Expressing hope that "we are now to deal in thorough fashion with monopoly all along the line, playing no favorites and having no pets," Borah said both the old political parties have made solemn pledges for 40 years that they intended to destroy it.

"We hear very little about the deficiency of the law in a campaign," he added.

"Everyone realizes that this thing we call recovery is in a jittery, shaky condition," Borah continued. "* * * There can be no permanent recovery, no solid rebuilding of the economic system, for at least 50,000,000 American people so long as private price-fixing continues."

He contended price-fixing is going on upon a large scale and that the Federal Trade Commission "has, or can shortly have, ample facts to justify action upon the part of the Government."

A short time before he gave out his statement, Trade Commission officials told reporters they were considering issuing a general complaint against use of the "basing point" price system by the whole steel industry.

sentative Taber, who unsuccessfully proposed a 10 per cent horizontal cut on the Agriculture bill, said he would vote for the Cannon 15 per cent plan "only if no better opportunity is given us to save."

Representative Robert Bacon (Republican), New York, minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, said he did not think it "wise" to give the President the discretion allowed in the Cannon plan.

Cannon said if the House attempts to apply the flat 10 per cent cut proposed by Taber, the legislation would be in committee "for two solid years."

Bache to Convert New York Home Into Art Museum

New York, April 28 (AP).—Jules S. Bache, banker, announced tonight he would convert his Fifth avenue residence into a public museum for the permanent exhibition of his art collection, regarded as one of the finest in the country.

The announcement was made as Bache departed for a summer in Europe. When he returns, Bache probably will establish living quarters in a hotel.

Included in the collection are four famous Italian paintings, each dating from the 15th century. This group is Bellini's "Madonna and Child." The others are "Madonna and Child" by Carlo Crivelli; "The Flight Into Egypt," by Cosimo Tura, and "Portrait of the Sassetti," by Ghirlandajo. Also in the collection is Raphael's "Giuliano De' Medici."

Schools in Poland Closed by Rioting

Warsaw, Poland, April 28 (AP).—A wave of anti-Semitic feeling flared today in riots between students, and the Academies of Commerce and Agriculture were closed indefinitely.

Police dispersed students who demonstrated before the Ministry of Education after clashes between Gentile and Jewish students had brought the school closing order.

University students have been charged with leading the anti-Semitic movement, linked with bombings of Jewish business houses, attacks on Jews in the streets, railways and buses, and with economic boycotts.

would not expand in such volume as they did in 1928 and 1929."

If a "considerable proportion of these excess savings" found its way into the Government, Wallace thought a stabilizing technique could be developed for Government expenditures. The need of such expenditures was "first, to bring about business stability and balance between productive power and consuming power; second, to conserve human resources, and third, to conserve natural resources."

He argued Government money thus spent would increase the purchasing power of the impecunious one-third of the population.

The Government might well aim to control housing construction so as to prevent a building boom and provide for sustained activity, Wallace said. Great organizations generally which are making decisions governing production and prices must be within Government control, Wallace asserted.

President Asks Law to Control Textile Wages

Expected to Be Last Bill for Single Industry, Capitol Hears.

By the Associated Press.

Congress heard yesterday President Roosevelt has given a "go-ahead" signal for legislation to regulate maximum working hours and minimum wages of the textile industry's 1,250,000 employes.

Word also spread at the Capitol that it would be the last measure for Federal regulation of an individual industry that the President would support.

Persons close to the Chief Executive said he favored general legislation to govern wages and hours and prohibit child labor in other industries.

The President has expressed hope that such general legislation would be enacted at this session of Congress, but he has refrained from predicting that it would be.

Chairman Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, of the House Labor Committee announced that the President has told him to go ahead with the national textile bill introduced by Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

He said one of the reasons hearings on the measure have been delayed heretofore was that the Administration was waiting for the Supreme Court's recent Wagner act decisions, to see what powers the court would concede to the Government. The court ruled that labor relations in manufacturing which involves interstate commerce are subject to Federal regulation.

Connery said it was the intention of the House Labor Committee to have the textile bill eliminate wage differentials between Northern and Southern mills. The now defunct NRA permitted Southern mills to pay lower wages than Northern ones.

Lincoln's Widow Leaves $3,000,000 Estate to Children

Mrs. Mary Harlan Lincoln widow of Robert Todd Lincoln, son of President Abraham Lincoln, left an estate of slightly less than $3,000,000, it was learned in District Court yesterday when a petition for the probate of her will was filed in District Court.

She owned real estate at 3014 N street northwest, where she made her winter home, which was valued at $74,000, and a summer home at Manchester, Vt., valued at $90,000. Her chief estate was made up of cash, stocks, bonds and other securities with a current market value of $2,800,000.

Two daughters, Mrs. Mary Lincoln Isham, of 3014 N street northwest, and Jessie Lincoln Randolph, 2908 N street northwest, and three grandchildren, Lincoln Isham, of New York, and Mary L. Beckwith and Robert L. Beckwith, survive. She died March 31.

Mrs. Isham was given the home on N street, together with a life interest in the Vermont property. Silverware, portraits and other household items were given to the daughters. Most of the estate is to be held in trust, with the children and grandchildren receiving a major share of the income.

The American Security & Trust Co., Norman B. Frost and Frederic N. Towers were named executors of the estate.

The General felt that the army was marching on his stomach

THE GENERAL remembered Napoleon's remark that "an army marches on its stomach" . . . but he couldn't help feeling that he himself could eat and drink enough to keep the whole army going.

Unlike the General, modern man prefers to travel on lighter fare. When he drinks, he sensibly drinks lightly of a light whiskey like IRISH AMERICAN.

In IRISH AMERICAN, modern man finds the fine, distinctive flavor that he wants for straight drinking, as well as in cocktails and highballs. And it has the mild lightness that fits in so well with his ideas of enjoyment and moderation. Combining the virtues of rich, robust pot still whiskey and a specially distilled American whiskey, IRISH AMERICAN is popular with discriminating drinkers everywhere.

City Prepares For 'Cleanup' As River Drops

Park, Md., had been doing repair work aboard the yacht Wilmerna.

According to Bowen, the skiff in which they were riding overturned suddenly. All three were heavily clothed and weighted down by tools in their pockets. The two boys, attracted by Bowen's shouts for help, rowed to the scene in a small boat and carried him to shore. When he asked for their names however, they refused to give them and hurried off.

Jenkins and Day were rescued by Campbell, who rowed to them in a small boat from the cruiser Mornot, anchored nearby. Harbor Police wrapped the rescued men in blankets and sent them home after learning none were injured.

Searchers late yesterday recovered the automobile in which four young people of Culpeper, Va., were drowned in the Robinson River Sunday night. Bodies of the two young women, Miss Laura Lindsay, 24, and Miss Betty Morrison, 23, were found in the car.

The submerged sedan was found about 200 yards downstream from the point where it toppled into a 30-foot torrent after a bridge approach at Locust Dale, 9 miles north of Orange, washed out.

Members of the Coast Guard from Baltimore and volunteers resumed search for the young women's companions, Joseph Crary, 26, and James I. Hogan, 26.

Weather Bureau officials here last night said the Potomac's crest reached Washington about 4 a. m. yesterday. The river gauge at the foot of Wisconsin avenue registered a height of 14.2 feet, and at Sycamore Island, 23.7 feet.

Washington's first cleanup step will be taken today when Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, attempts to remove the mud from K street along the Georgetown water front.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, said, however, he would not begin to "dig out" Potomac Park until waters had receded completely.

An estimate of damage along the park river front also was withheld by Finnan, but he added that the loss was expected to be "far below" that of last year.

With the exception of two main arteries, all roads in the city's park system were reopened yesterday. The speedway around Hains Point and the boulevard beneath Memorial Bridge at the watergate will remain closed for at least three days, Finnan said.

WPA workers labored throughout Tuesday night and early yesterday to make portions of the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway ready for morning rush-hour traffic.

Capt. Whitehurst reported Chain Bridge withstood the river's onslaught without serious consequences. The rushing water, he said, came within 8 feet of the span's flooring.

Sandbag dikes, hastily erected by CCC youths, WPA workers and parks men, will remain standing until all danger has passed, Finnan declared. Prompt construction of the levees, he said, probably saved landscaping from more serious damage.

In nearby Maryland, however, the flood damage problem was acute. Nathan L. Smith, chief engineer of the State roads commission, said a $500,000 bond issue "would just about" cover damage to the State's highway system.

All bridges across the Potomac River in Maryland were reopened yesterday, it was reported, except the one at Hancock. The center span of this temporary bridge was carried away by the flood.

In southern Maryland many roads were inundated and are now badly in need of repairs. One bridge in Calvert County probably will have to be rebuilt, authorities reported.

Bolling Field Suffers.

With railroad facilities crippled in many parts of the affected area, travelers are still being rerouted many miles off the main lines to avoid washouts.

Air traffic from Washington Airport is expected to be resumed today. Passenger flights, with the local field partially under water, have been centered at Logan Field in Baltimore. Eastern Air Lines said patrons are being transported by automobile to the Baltimore airport.

Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, yesterday made an inspection trip by rowboat to the Bolling Field hangars. He said the new field is undamaged, but that the old field suffered considerably.

Hermit of Great Falls Thinks 1889 Potomac Flood Was Best

Millard Reid, Shanty Dweller Along River for Many Years, Ruminates as He Surveys Torrent; Can't Live Anywhere Else.

The hermit of Great Falls, Millard A. Reid, whose address, according to a sign on his shanty, is 1313 Potomac River, thinks this latest rampage of his boulevard is "pretty good," but not so good as the one in '89.

"Course the one last year was mighty nigh as good as the one in '89," Reid ruminated yesterday as he surveyed the majestic sweep of water roaring past his craggy home. "Last year the water came up over the rocks to my window tops, but I don't think she was quite as high as the year of the Johnstown flood. That was a great flood," and he shook his head in wistful reminiscence.

"I been looking at that river a good many years," he remarked, "and I got so I love it. Just can't stand to be away from it. Once or twice I tried to get away and went to Washington, but I always came back. I'm lost when I'm away from my river. It gives me my living. I catch catfish in it to eat, and bass. And I rent boats to picnickers, and I used to trap muskrats in the old days, but lately it's got so the youngsters steal your rats and your traps, too.

Likes to Lie on Banks.

"I like to lie out on the banks and listen to her singing to me in the evening, and I think about all the places and sights upstream she has flowed past, and the people along there, far away in the mountains, and then the long way down to the sea. I used to get in a bateau when I was younger and row out into the middle and just float along for hours, dreaming like. The movement of the river, never stopping, always running along, I like, too. But me, I don't like to move myself. I'm happy right here in my shanty."

Reid is decidedly different from the stereotyped fictional hermit. No shaggy-bearded ancient is he, with tattered clothes and high shepherd's crook, and incoherent mumblings of death and witches and buried gold. He has a very snappy close haircut, a white shirt, spaghetti for lunch, a pet duckling named Pee Pee, also a pet chick, likewise named Pee Pee, and considerable contempt for the denizens of Washington with all their worries about taxes and Supreme Courts.

"I've seen some funny things come floating down the river," he said, going into his three-room house, where the walls are plastered with newsprint wallpaper, and greeting his daughter, Blanche, who has lived with him off and on for 31 years. "One late afternoon last January I saw a man float by and an overturned canoe beside him. Yeah, I fished him out."

Daughter Keeps Record.

Blanche at this point rushed to a cabinet and pulled out a ledger and exclaimed, "It was January 25, 1936. That's the date." Blanche, who wants to be a nurse, is heavily inclined toward chronography, and keeps a minute log of the little doings at the shanty. "He went out into the rough water of the rapids," she explained, pointing through the window to a rocky channel where waves broke 6 feet high, "and it was right there he rescued the man."

Returning to her ledger, she remarked, "the day I came back from my husband in Washington I caught a 5-pound carp. Here it is in the book. I can always remember the day I left him because that's the day I caught the carp."

N. Y. Vigilantes To Co-operate Against Crime

Citizens' Committee Will Place Observers With Police, Courts.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—A modern committee of "vigilantes" today announced its strategy against organized crime and for more efficient administration of justice in New York City.

Unlike its counterpart in the days of the West's lusty fancy this "citizens' committee on the control of crime in New York" will co-operate with the police and the district attorney's office.

The committee—with many prominent names on its list—had its inception in the presentment to Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook by the first extraordinary "rackets" grand jury last August 5, and took preliminary form at a meeting a few days later by Mayor LaGuardia.

Opening of the committee's campaign came after employment of two fresh grand juries to carry on the city's drive against racketeering.

Harry F. Guggenheim, one-time American Ambassador to Cuba, is president of the committee, which has opened a campaign for members and for public subscription of $200,000 to finance the first three years' work.

The committee plans to send trained observers to police headquarters, the district attorney's offices of New York, Bronx, Kings and Queens Counties, to the felony courts and the office of the chief city magistrate.

These observers, Guggenheim explained, will also transcribe essential records of the clerks of the various courts and make daily reports to the committee's headquarters. The reports will be studied and analyzed "to determine the trend in crime and in the administration of the law and for indications of conditions meriting special inquiries."

Towns on Ohio River Begin Mopping Up as Flood Subsides

Wheeling, Pittsburgh, Johnstown Find Damage Slight as Muddy Crest Passes; Red Cross Cares for 1,000 Refugees.

By the Associated Press.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 28.—Flood waters of three States rolled down the sluggish Ohio River tonight, leaving thousands homeless in their wake.

The river released its grip on the Wheeling industrial district of approximately 200,000 population as the third day of the flood ran its course.

Danger of catastrophic flood damage diminished throughout the area as the Ohio led the retreat of rain-swollen waterways back to their normal channels.

Municipal clean-up squads and dislodged residents followed with mops and brooms the slow recession of the waters.

Johnstown Normal.

Many hours still remained before the muddy waters would seep to a safe margin below the flood's crest of 45.9 feet reached early today. The flood stage is 36 feet.

Normalcy returned to the "flood city" of Johnstown, Pa., which bore the brunt of the first attack of the tributaries to the North Monday.

The Stony Creek and Conemaugh River, which had poured two feet of water into main business streets, flowed placidly southward tonight, 7 feet below the 16-foot flood stage.

The Red Cross at Pittsburgh was caring for more than 1,000 refugees who were driven yesterday from their homes in low-lying suburbs and river-front districts when the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers climbed 10 feet past the 25-foot flood stage at their junction with the Ohio River.

High water temporarily closed several industrial plants along the rivers, leaving approximately 15,000 workers idle. But the peak of the flood passed yesterday, leaving only minor property damage.

Pittsburgh city council sent a plea to the Federal Government to hasten its proposed flood-control reservoirs in the Ohio watersheds.

Hardest hit as a result of unseasonable rains throughout the Northeast was London, Ontario, where authorities estimated the rain-burdened Thames River caused $3,000,000 damage. The Thames drove 6,000 persons from their homes before reaching a crest of 28 feet above normal. The waters receded today.

The 10,000 residents on Wheeling Island faced the largest task of rehabilitation. Despite the recession, the river still covered the 2½-mile stretch of the island.

Opium Worth $5,000 Seized on U. S. Liner

New York, April 28 (AP).—Special agents of the Treasury Department seized 40 pounds of gum opium, valued at approximately $5,000, on the United States Liner President Harding early today and arrested three men, two of them members of the crew.

They were charged with violation of the narcotic drug import and export act and with smuggling.

Midwife Is Held For Girl's Death; 100 Names Found

Watonga, Okla., April 28 (AP).—Officials checked the names of 100 girls and women in three States and sought evidence of other alleged deaths tonight in what County Attorney Nelson Crow termed "the most monstrous abortion racket ever revealed in Oklahoma."

Crow said statements already had been obtained from some women and others would be questioned as to whether they received treatment from Mrs. Della Moore, 57-year-old midwife charged with the abortion death of Miss Merl Williams, 21, of Clinton, Okla.

Mrs. Moore and her husband, John, pipe-smoking farmer, pleaded innocent today to murder charges. Both denied any knowledge of illegal operations.

Crow said he had a list of 100 alleged patients of Mrs. Moore from correspondence found in her shabby three-room home at Longdale. He estimated 500 women from Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas had been treated over a nine-year period.

India Raiders Kill, Injure 22 British

Simla, India, April 28 (AP).—Fanatical tribesmen raided a British military camp in Waziristan last night leaving 22 dead and injured, reports from the northwest border province said today.

The tribesmen, followers of the Fakir of Ipi, self-styled "champion of Islam," suddenly attacked the Second Infantry Brigade's camp in the lower Kahaisora Valley. The fekir has opposed British rule more than 30 years. More than 6,000 British troops have poured into the district, near the Arghanistan frontier, to quell the revolt.

Opponents Get Majority, 10-8, On Court Plan

O'Mahoney said, is "to bring about a more enlightened interpretation of the Constitution." This, he said, would precipitate the court into "a political whirlpool" and make it subject to change in every Administration.

"It is no answer to say that political judges have heretofore been appointed," said O'Mahoney. "It is no answer to say that certain judges allow their economic predilections to sway their judgments. Both of these things are wrong."

Senator Hatch said he perceived merit in some plan for "infusing new blood into the court" but opposed the use of that method to bring about certain court decisions.

Hatch is the author of an amendment to add one justice a year to the court, but to permit the court to return to a membership of nine after older justices retire.

Hatch Objects to "Invasion."

Hatch said he thought the "new blood" argument sound, but saw how the plan "could be used, not by President Roosevelt, but by a President 10 or 25 years from now, to bring about a particular line of decisions.

"I do not think Congress has the power to place on the Supreme Court to effect decisions in any way whatsoever. To do so would be an exercise of judicial power by the legislative branch of the Government. If we place men on the court to change the trend of judicial opinions we thereby invade the province of the court and do that which many people have charged the court with doing."

Although many variations on the President's court plan have been offered, the committee line-up yesterday on a straight six-judge increase, appeared as follows:

For increase—Senators Ashurst, Neely, Logan, Dietrich, Pittman, Hughes and McGill (Democrats), and Norris (Independent). Hughes and McGill are not formally committed to the plan, Logan has said he does not like it, and Norris has favored it only in absence of "something better."

Senate Division Close.

The division in the Senate proper is so close that speculation has turned on whether the Vice President might have to cast the deciding vote. To get the bill to the Senate floor, friends of the plan might attempt a report "without recommendation," but it is believed the opposition would balk such a move.

It is expected the Administration will try to get the best compromise possible in the Senate, then attempt to get full House approval of the original bill. Differences would then be resolved in conference.

Solicitor General Reed yesterday in his letter to Ashurst said his 1936 report showing the Supreme Court was up with its work was "entirely consistent" with the President's message.

Silent on Quorum Right.

"These documents contain nothing which could be construed as an intimation that the Supreme Court is not up with its work," said Reed. "Any charge that the President was misled by erroneous information furnished him collapses before the obvious fact that no such position was taken."

Reed said the President's proposals for relieving congestion and speeding litigation in the inferior Federal courts would further increase the burden of work on the Supreme Court—which he said already has been "substantially increased" by the need both of hearing and deciding cases and determining whether petitions for review should be granted.

Reed declined to express an opinion on whether Congress had power to fix the number of judges which would constitute a quorum, but recalled "Congress has assumed to exercise such power ever since the Court was established and the power has never been judicially questioned."

3 Senators' Views on Court

Transcribed verbal statements made to the press yesterday by Senators McCarran, of Nevada; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Hatch, of New Mexico, in opposition to a six-judge increase in the Supreme Court.

SENATOR McCARRAN:

"The Supreme Court of the U. S. should be an independent part of the Government. It stands as an independent arbiter between the state and the government; and when I say the state I mean an orderly and organized body of people—the source of all law.

"In a constitutional government like ours it requires an independent arbiter to say when any government in power might overstep the Constitution.

"In my judgment, the Supreme Court should not be a department of government subject to the will of either of the other two branches of government. While the Supreme Court and every other court that interprets the law should at all times keep abreast of the law and therefore be progressive, it is not for any other branch of the Government to say it should reform its views to carry out the will of the other branch."

Destructive of Confidence

"For that reason, I am opposed and will continue to oppose the President's bill, because it is in my judgment destructive of the confidence the people have and should have in their court of last resort.

"If that court, which is the final arbiter in all matters involving the rights of the people, can be remoded to suit the will of any other department of government, then it would mean that this court, which should at all times be a stable branch of the Government, would be molded to suit the will of every changing administration.

"The confidence of the people in the court of last resort is its greatest asset, and the confidence of the people is the thing on which this democratic form of government must rely if it is to continue through the centuries.

"My amendment provides that two judges be added to the present membership of nine without regard to age or retirement. It is, therefore, in keeping with the spirit and intent of the Constitution. It is not revolutionary. It would inspire confidence in the court. It is in keeping with the growth of the country and the growth of the business of the court since it was last reorganized three-quarters of a century ago.

No Unbalancing of Court.

"It should have the support of the President, because it would give him an opportunity of carrying out the spirit of the Constitution in appointing two members; it should have and would have the support of popular expression because the populace would know that there would be no unbalancing of the court of last resort, and that new thought and new blood would bring it a recognition of changed conditions.

"Prompt approval of my amendment by the committee would, I believe, mean prompt approval by Congress, and would give us a chance to proceed with essential legislation and recess.

"I will oppose the measure that proposes to increase the court at one fell swoop by six members, because I think it is not in keeping with the spirit of our organic law. I shall do everything in my power to fairly present my amendment and work for its adoption."

SENATOR HATCH:

"My purpose in offering the amendment to limit the power so so that not more than one justice would be appointed in one year was first, in recognition that the stated purpose of the original bill to infuse new blood into the court was sound. I believe it has a great deal more merit than has been accorded to it by any one. I did perceive how that plan could be used, not by President Roosevelt, but by a President 10 or 25 years from now, to bring about a particular line of decisions. I do not think Congress has the power to place men on the Supreme Court to affect decisions in any way whatever. To do so would be an exercise of judicial power by the legislative branch of the Government. If we place men on the court to change the trend of judicial opinions we thereby invade the province of the court and do that which many people have charged the court with doing.

It never has been necessary for me to consider the dictatorship charges and other criticisms of that character. I simply believe Congress does not have the power to do it. But I do believe in a regular, orderly, long-range program to put men on the bench when justices refuse to retire—for the efficient and orderly transaction of the business of the court. I do not believe that Congress has the power to increase the size of the court for any other purpose."

SENATOR O'MAHONEY:

"The hearings have been completed; I have listened attentively to everything that has been said, and I have heard nothing to date which has convinced me that any increase of the court is either necessary or desirable.

"If it should appear that the work of the court really demanded more judges on the Supreme Court there might be some justification for the addition of two justices as proposed by Senator McCarran. But his proposal is not accompanied by any suggestion for modification of the act of 1925 by which the court is enabled to limit the number of cases coming up on certiorai.

"The only justification, therefore, that remains is that which is based on the argument that the court ought to be enlarged in order to bring about a more enlightened interpretation of the Constitution. It seems to me to be perfectly manifest that if we can increase the court to obtain our view of certain close constitutional questions, then every succeeding Administration can do likewise, and the court would thereby be precipitated into the political whirlpool.

"It is no answer to say that political judges have heretofore been appointed; it is no answer to say that certain judges allow their economic predilections to sway their judgments. Both of these things are wrong. Our duty is to make certain as far as we can that economic predilections and political views shall not be used in deciding cases before the courts.

"Democrats should remember that Thomas Jefferson locked horns with Chief Justice Marshall and the Supreme Court at the very beginning of his Administration, but though he could have overwhelmed Marshall by expanding the court, he never did it."

Woman Fleeced of $45 By Glib-Tongued Gypsy

Another glib-tongued gypsy woman fleeced a colored woman of her savings yesterday on the pretext of blessing the bills "to bring her good luck and prosperity."

The victim, Rosie Jones, 29, 1337 I street northeast, told police she was approached by the gypsy in her home. The gypsy placed the money —$45— in a handkerchiefs and made signs as if to bless it. When the woman left, the victim said her money was gone and only a roll of paper was in the handkerchief.

Union Organizer Murdered by Mine Guards In Harlan 'Showdown,' U. M. W. Charges

comin' to finish me off. I seen my only chanct was to play dead, so I laid my hands over my heart so the blood would run all over me.

"White and Wash Irvin climbed down and went over me good. Wash said, 'He's as dead as he'll ever be.' White said, 'Let the —— —— —— lay there, he won't never do no more talkin.'"

Taylor said White and Irvin searched him, and took his guns, his pocketbook, a fountain pen and even his pocket comb.

"That afternoon a deputy whose name I don't aim to give here—not unless I go crazy—come into my room and said, 'Hugh, if you got any friends, tell them to git you out of here and do it fast, for if you don't, you're going to be kidnaped out of here tonight and killed."

Taylor obtained his removal in an ambulance to Pineville, seat of an adjoining county, and later to a hospital in Washington. He said Sheriff Middleton and Clarence Poor visited him in Pineville, and first promised him a job at $150 a month and later the cash payment of $2,000 and a car if he would absent himself from the present investigation.

He said he accepted one payment of $67.50 by the sheriff, who also repaired his car. The sheriff said, according to Taylor, "Stick by me and I'll stick by you."

Mrs. Taylor corroborated her husband's testimony on the stand, and then David Sullenberger, "21 years old come June," took the stand, to tell the committee he was [illegible] Taylor's car that night, and that Taylor's story was correct.

Young Sullenberger, testifying he was shot five times from either side of the car, in each arm, each leg and in the back, said one wound still is being treated. He said the unknown man searched him, but took nothing, while Irvin and White, returning from searching Taylor, searched him again, taking his empty wallet. White, according to the lad, said, "We ought to shoot you ag'in."

Taylor's shooting by the deputies came as the grand jury in Harlan met to investigate a previous killing, that of Bennett Musick, 19-year-old son of Marshall Musick, a union organizer who preaches in the Baptist Church Sundays. Taylor was prepared to tell the grand jury of another ambush on the Musicks.

Taylor admitted being now under indictment for murder, for shooting a drunken man in a fight when, in his former capacity as a deputy, he tried to make an arrest. "I killed a man," he said simply, as La Follette asked him to tell what happened.

Earlier, Mrs. Lawrence Howard, buxom blonde waitress in a Harlan County lunchroom and wife of the young grocery clerk who told the committee last week he had been threatened with death if he continued to testify, told of a conversation she overheard in the lunchroom two hours before young Bennett Musick was killed the night of February 9.

"Six deputies, all armed and some drunk, left the place a-sayin', 'We're going up to see old man Musick,'" related Mrs. Howard.

Young Howard and his wife, testifying together, told the story reluctantly and with frightened glances around the room, where Sheriff Middleton and his deputies sat, grim-faced and intent.

"George Lee, Frank White, Allen Bowlin, Marcus Allred, Arnold Angel and Merle Middleton, the sheriff's brother, all deputies, came in the lunchroom about 6:30 p. m.," said Mrs. Howard. "They looked like they had been drinking quite a while. George Lee was a-drinkin' and a-talkin' at the counter. He laid down two guns before Merle Middleton and said, 'We'd ought to get goin' if we're goin' to see old man Musick tonight.'"

Young Howard refused to accompany them, he said.

At 9:30 p. m. a fusillade of high-power bullets tore through the Musicks' living room, 14 shots in all, wounding Musick's mother and younger brother, while Bennett Musick pitched to the floor dead. No one was indicted for the shooting.

La Follette said, "What puzzles me is the frankness of these deputies in your presence. Why did they talk so freely about what they were going to do?"

"They don't care who hears them —down there," she said, as the spectators laughed. Sheriff Middleton, who has insisted several times on his "constitutional immunity," and the deputies who have been on the stand have seemed reluctant to answer questions.

Plea of Stitely Denies Guilt in Parks Shortage

Voucher Chief Is Refused Cut in Bail; More Arrests Possible.

Reno E. Stitely, 29-year-old chief of the voucher division, National Parks Service, pleaded not guilty yesterday when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on a charge of fraudulently obtaining $6,855.60 through false claims.

Through his attorney, James Reilly, Stitely waived the reading of the warrant and asked that the $10,000 bond set at the time of his arrest be reduced.

After considering the charge, Commissioner Turnage refused the reduction. He said the United States attorney's office had agreed to the same bail but had objected to a smaller sum. Hearing was set for May 13.

Refuses Discussion.

Stitely was seized in his home, 2704 Courtland place northwest, Tuesday by United States Marshal Thomas Ott and Deputy Marshal Clayton Gasque. The arrest was made on a warrant sworn to by Robert C. McCarthy, special investigative agent for the Department of Interior.

Stitely appeared before Turnage nervous and pale. He was shaken and smoked many cigarettes before the hearing. He refused to discuss the case with newspapermen.

Lost $50,000 Investigated.

The arrest of Stitely was in connection with an investigation of a $50,000 shortage in the Interior Department's accounts. It was indicated the inquiry might result in the arrest of several men due to the fact that payroll checks were signed in different handwritings.

Agents charge that pay roll checks were drawn up on several occasions payable to fictitious persons. When these checks were approved, it was charged they were extracted from the rolls and endorsed by different signatures. The signatures, however, were always made with the same ink, agents said.

Gallery Bans Painting Resembling Edward

London, April 28 (AP).—The Royal Academy today ordered removal of a painting from its annual exhibition because it looked too much like former King Edward VIII.

The painting, representing a crowned figure and entitled "The Lord of Creation," was declared by the artist, Oswald Moser, to be entirely symbolical.

Many who viewed it, however, believed it to represent the abdicated King, and interpreted the academy's action as part of a campaign to remove the Duke of Windsor from the public consciousness.

Radio Preacher Dies.

'Pink Undies,' Knee Breeches Oust Trousers As America's Choice for Coronation Attire

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—A little touchy on the subject of pants, notables departing for England today for the coronation gave a verbal preview of what the well-dressed American will wear in London May 12.

It's knee breeches, all right, for the civilians, but for the military men, well——

Already disturbed by descriptions of his new uniform, Gen. John J. Pershing answered with a "please go away" look when a reporter asked him if he would wear knee breeches.

Admiral Hugh Rodman, United States Navy, retired former commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, had a snappy report.

"No," he replied to the question that has become a stock query with reporters since Ambassador Robert W. Bingham announced he would wear the knee pants that his testy predecessor, Charles G. Dawes, rejected, "I think I will wear pink undies."

Financier J. P. Morgan and James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, have announced they would wear knee breeches. Distrustful of trousers-minded American tailors, Gerard will have his pants fitted in London.

Gen. Pershing, irked by stories he would wear a gold-braided, multi-buttoned uniform of his own design, brought up the fashion question himself.

"That story about my uniform was grossly exaggerated," he said. "The uniform I will wear is only a modification of the brigadier general's uniform I wore 20 years ago. The only change I have made on it is the insignia of rank."

Lack of Interest Cited.

While notables scurried abroad for the coronation, however, there was noted a falling-off among the rank and file in the trek. The French line, the Cunard White Star line, the North German Lloyd and the United States lines said many Americans seemed to have lost their interest in the coronation and had canceled passage. One spokesman traced the development to the recent counsel of Lord Dudley Marley, who warned Americans of high prices that would attend the ceremonies.

2,000,000 Visitors Expected.

London, April 28 (AP).—A new "army of occupation," mustered from the far corners of the world, is moving into London with such rapidity that nearly 2,000,000 visitors may be on hand for the coronation of King George VI.

Turbaned Indian rulers rub elbows in the streets with merchants from Sweden, school teachers from Australia, government officials from nearly every section of the far-flung British empire and hunreds of Americans.

Roosevelt Signs Bill To Prevent Blindness

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a bill to authorize the District health officer to enforce regulation aimed at preventing blindness in infants.

The law requires physicians, midwives, or others in attendance at childbirth to administer prophylactics to the infant's eyes and to notify the health department if any inflammation continues.

Capt. Frederick Guest British Statesman, Dies

London, April 28 (AP).—Capt. Frederick Edward Guest, 61, former secretary of state for air, died of pleurisy today at Sunbury-on-Thames.

He was the father of the noted American polo player, Winston Guest.

Pilot, Dispatching, Radio Are Blamed For E. A. L. Crash

The non-fatal Eastern Airlines airplane crash near Milford, Pa., December 19, with Henry T. (Dick) Merrill as pilot, was caused by pilot error, improper dispatching and static conditions which interfered with radio reception, a Bureau of Air Commerce accident board announced yesterday.

The plane, a 14-passenger twin-motored Douglas, was on its way to Newark N. J., from Miami. It carried a crew of three, including Merrill, and eight passengers.

After leaving Charleston, S. C., in the late afternoon, the plane encountered rough weather. After passing over Washington and Baltimore Merrill headed for Camden, but was unable to land because of poor weather.

With his radio cut off by rain static, Merrill then headed for Newark by dead reckoning, having flown the route many times.

Mistaking lights for those of New Brunswick, N. J., he began a slow descent. The plane crashed into a tree and continued on for 400 feet. It was completely wrecked. Merrill was seriously injured, the co-pilot slightly injured and one passenger was slightly hurt.

The board concluded Merrill was "over-confident in the dead reckoning course * * * and was in error for attempting to let down under the overcast for a landing at Newark without having established his position."

Improper dispatching of the plane also was condemned by the board.

Woman Hurls Stones, Kills Young Matron

Lexington Resident Jailed on Homicide Charge as Victim Dies.

Lexington, Va., April 28 (AP).—A stone thrown by an infuriated woman was responsible for the death of a 24-year-old Lexington mother, Coroner E. P. Tompkins said today.

Mrs. Myrtle McCormick Camden died last night from a brain clot, caused, Dr. Thompkins said, by a stone thrown at her by Mrs. Polly Breedlove.

The coroner said he was told Mrs. Breedlove was at the Camden home Monday night and was told to go home. This apparently infuriated Mrs. Breedlove, he said, and she began hurling stones through a back window. One of them struck Mrs. Camden in the head.

Howard F. Rough Chosen Assistant Air Bureau Chief

Howard F. Rough, former Department of Commerce inspector and supervising aeronautical inspector, was appointed Assistant Director of the Bureau of Air Commerce yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Roper.

He will succeed Maj. R. W. Schroeder, who will resign July 1 to become vice president in charge of operations for United Air Lines. At present Rough is a territorial manager of the aviation division of the Gulf Refining Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Rough is a former World War pilot. He enlisted in the Army Air Service at the outbreak of the war. He entered the Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Commerce in 1922, serving through the early period of organizing the Nation's airmen and aircraft. In 1929 he was promoted to assistant chief of the Inspection Service, remaining there until 1931, when he was put in charge of a large inspection district with headquarters at Detroit, as supervising aeronautical inspector. He resigned in 1935 to accept the post with the Gulf company.

Peace Groups Hold Grant's Old Office On 115th Birthday

By the Associated Press.

Ulysses S. Grant's 115th birthday anniversary found his old military headquarters Tuesday in a compromising historical predicament.

Housed in the big gray stone building where the black-bearded Union general directed operations in 1865 are:

The National Council for the Prevention of War.

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

The ancient floors support squads of desks at which people work hour after hour towards abolishing war.

Once a large lady stormed up the front steps, announced she was for a big Army and Navy and said she thought what had happened to Grant's headquarters was a shame.

One of the peace workers impishly pointed out the State and War Departments Building across the street and added:

"David eyeing Goliath."

House Seeks End Of 'Sucker List'

By the United Press.

The House Tuesday passed and sent to the Senate a resolution designed to end so-called "sucker list" publicity of the income of high-salaried business men and movie stars.

The resolution, approved 229 to 112, would repeal a provision of the revenue laws which now requires the Treasury to make public all corporation salary and bonus payments above $15,000 a year.

The law has been in effect for two years and has resulted in wide publicity of the annual earnings of corporation executives and such highly-paid actors as Greta Garbo, Mae West, Clark Gable and Robert Taylor.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, sponsored repeal of the controversial requirement. He said it had "served no useful purpose" and that the salary reports had been used by racketeers in making up "sucker lists."

Memorial Prize Donated to G. W.

In memory of Joshua Evans 3d, member of the senior class at George Washington University who died February 2, a memorial prize has been donated by his parents and friends.

The award, to be made annually, will go to "that man in the graduating class of the George Washington University who has demonstrated signal ability in the social and political sciences and who has given promise of the interpretation of this ability in good citizenship among his fellows."

The man will be selected by the president of the university and a committee representing the faculty.

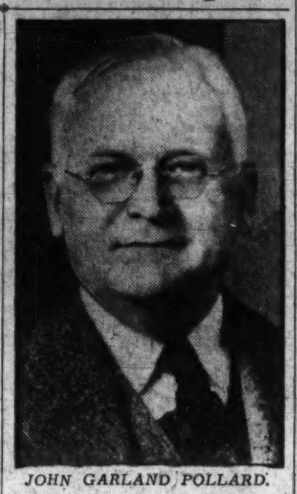
Former Gov. John G. Pollard Dies at His Home in Capital

Was Depression Period Virginia Executive; Also Educator.



JOHN GARLAND POLLARD.

John Garland Pollard, 66, Virginia's depression Governor who kept a balanced budget, sometime college professor, art patron, rescuer of the Democratic Party in the State after the political debacle of 1928 and chairman of the Board of Veterans' Appeals here since 1934, died yesterday at his home, 1026 Sixteenth street.

Bronchial Pneumonia Fatal.

Bronchial pneumonia ended his career which flashed across the Virginia political field with periodic bursts since the turn of the century. The career, one of extremes, brought him into the State constitutional convention (1902-07); later he was teacher in the College of William and Mary, to seek, unsuccessfully, the Governorship; to try his hand at publishing; to lead movements for the aid of poor children; to patronize the arts and then, when the Democratic Party had been cut to ribbons following the Al Smith defeat in Virginia, to lead a fight in 1929 which routed the coalition forces and returned the Democrats to a position they had lost but once since Reconstruction days.

His death resulted from illness that came last September. He recovered somewhat, but three weeks ago his condition grew critical. At his bedside when he died were his wife, Mrs. Violet Elizabeth McDougall Pollard, hs one-time secretary, and his three children.

Funeral Services Today.

The funeral services will be held at the Grove Avenue Baptist Church, Richmond, at 4 p. m. today. Burial will be in Hollywood Cemetery, Richmond. Dr. Rufus Weaver, of Washington, will assist Dr. W. C. James, pastor of Grove Avenue Church, in the services. F. Clyde Baggarly, of Washington, will represent the Federal Trade Commission at the services.

Senator Byrd and Frank Bane, executive secretary of the Social Security Board, will be among those going from Washington to the funeral.

He was bron in King and Queen County, Va., August 4, 1871, a son of the Rev. and Mrs. John P. Pollard, and attended Richmond College (class of 1891) and later studied law at Columbian College, now George Washington University. He was married August 10, 1898, to Miss Grace Phillips. Her death occurred May 4, 1932. It was in July of 1933, when the former Governor surprised his most intimate friends by his marriage to Miss McDougall in Winnipeg, Canada.

Stout, bespectacled and with a wit that customarily flashed—particularly when he argued about whether the Pilgrims landed in Virginia or in Massachusetts—Pollard was precipitated in Virginia politics when horses and buggies carried the statesmen to the crossroads and when issues were twirled in plumes of oratory from courthouse lawns.

Was Depression Governor

Through 1920-21, he was a member of the Federal Trade Commission. In the ensuing year, he resigned and became dean of the Marshall-Wythe School of Government and Citizenship at the College of William and Mary.

In this position he watched the ebb of Democratic party fortunes in 1928. For the first time since Phil McKinney, "redeemed"—as it is known in Virginia—the party from the Republicans, the State had swung G. O. P. and party lines were broken.

In the summer of 1929, Pollard—his classrooms "out," was on the stump for the Democratic nomination for Governor, opposing G. Walter Mapp, a renowned "dry" of Accomac County, on the Eastern Shore. Pollard won. But the political kettle held a brew mixed of the uproar from the 1928 Democratic set-back and a coalition party, formed of "Anti-Smith Democrats" and regular Republicans, opposed Pollard in the November general election. The coalition candidate was William Mosely Brown, a stout, quick-tongued professor in Washington and Lee University.

The two stumped the State from the Tidewater to Cumberland Gap and the coalition purse was bulging. Brown cried for new party heads for Thomas Jefferson's white-columned capitol; Pollard urged a return to the ancient hearthstone. Pollard won.

Here he was a member of the Cosmos Club; was a member of Richmond Chapter, Beta Theta Pi Fraternity, and the William and Mary Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. Several universities, including George Washington, conferred the LL. D. degree upon him.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Herbert Lee Boatwright, of Washington; and two sons, John Garland Pollard, jr., of Washington, and Charles P. Pollard, of New York City.

High Virginia OfficialsMourn Pollard's Death

Byrd, Peery, Price Among Friends, State Leaders Paying Tributes.

By the Associated Press.

Sorrow for the death of former Gov. John Garland Pollard was expressed yesterday by the Governor, high-ranking officials and by employes of the State who knew him intimately during his administration.

Senator Harry F. Byrd, predecessor to Mr. Pollard as Governor of Virginia, said:

"I feel a great personal loss in the death of Gov. Pollard. * * * To me he embodied the highest qualities of a patriotic man whose sole desire was to promote the welfare of all the people of his State and of the country. Virginia and the Nation are better because Gov. Pollard lived and served in important public offices. His record of constructive statesmanship will stand as an inspiration for generations to come."

Gov. Peery declared the former Governor's administration had been characterized by outstanding ability and unselfish devotion. Lieut. Gov. James H. Price said he was devoted to the interest of Virginia and had rendered a noteworthy public service.

Throng of 1,000 Welcome Stork At District Home

The stork was given a noisy welcome when he visited a District home with a 6-pound boy last night.

Awaiting him were 1,000 excited men and women in the street, three scout cars, two rescue squads and two ambulances. The baby he brought could scarcely be heard crying above the din of the informal committee.

Police hurried to the scene when they heard there was a gas case at the home of the mother, Mrs. Eunice Fitzhugh, wife of Joseph Fitzhugh, at 609½ Morton place northeast.

It was found to be a mistake, for Mrs. Fitzhugh was about to have a baby. A physician arrived as sirens shrilled.

When the baby arrived, Mrs. Fitzhugh was taken through the crowd to Providence Hospital, where physicians said she and her son were doing well.

Preliminary Victory.

The first round in the battle of the cherry blossoms goes in favor of the trees. The second deficiency bill, reported to the House from the Appropriations Committee yesterday, omits the $500,000 item which would have permitted an immediate start on the proposed destruction of the Tidal Basin area.

Potomac Park is not yet saved from the contemplated desecration of its mellow beauty. It will not be until another site for the Jefferson Memorial has been definitely selected and approved. But the worst danger has been averted. It was more than possible—it was actually probable—that the handful who favor the Tidal Basin location would be able to tear up that section before the people of Washington had any idea of the magnitude of the vandalism contemplated. With the undertaking actually started community protests would have been too late.

Effort may be made to reincorporate the omitted item, or to include it in a later deficiency measure. But it will no longer be possible to do this in a surreptitious manner and in the meantime the arguments against the site at present proposed should steadily gain ground. They are so overwhelming that the more time there is for consideration the less likelihood there will be of the ghastly blunder which now seems to have been narrowly averted.

Every day seems to produce new reasons for finally striking the Tidal Basin site from the list of possibilities. Yesterday morning the proposed location was very largely under water, giving an indication of the danger of placing a huge marble mausoleum on land periodically subject to submergence. Occasional flooding is not a serious disaster in the case of trees. But it is scarcely desirable for a massive monument planned for a spot where there is no certainty of reaching rock bottom at less than 85 feet below the surface level.

Yesterday also produced expert testimony that the whole memorial project as now outlined would probably cost at least three times the $3,000,000 advertised, without allowing for such incalculable factors as floods during the period of construction. This coincided with the revelation that the need for economy is so urgent that impounding of 15 per cent of all appropriations for Federal agencies is being recommended by the President. In face of an emergency of this character the flagrant waste of $10,000,000, to place a forbidding mausoleum where scarcely anybody wants it, would be downright absurdity.

Technical, financial, diplomatic, esthetic and commercial objections combine to form an overwhelming case against the Tidal Basin site. The director of the National Park Service said yesterday that removal of the trees would kill all the older ones, given to this country by Japan as a symbol of growing friendship. The loss to local business involved in the wanton destruction of the city's greatest single attraction was stressed by the executive secretary of the Hotel Men's Association.

Against a cloud of hostile witnesses advocates of the commission site have been totally unable to present a valid or even a coherent case. They have now a chance to retreat gracefully, and with full honor, from a position which has become completely untenable.

Bringing It Home.

Britain's defense loan, the first installment of which amounts to nearly $500,000,000, will be open for subscription not only to professional investors but to the "little fellow" as well. Bonds of $25 denomination will be made directly available to the public through the postoffices.

This constitutes a striking reversion to war-time practice. During the last great orgy of bloodletting all belligerent governments, including our own, found it necessary to tap every possible source of funds. This had a practical as well as a psychological importance. Large sums were garnered when myriads of small investors made their savings available to the government. But of equal value was the fact that this popular investment in victory made it easier to conduct the war.

The sum which Neville Chamberlain now proposes to borrow for rearmament is not excessively great. It would be easy, no doubt, to have the whole issue taken up by the banks and large individual investors. That the chancellor of the exchequer has chosen to make the loan also available to the general public, in small morsels, indicates that Great Britain, like so many other nations, considers herself in a war-time frame of mind.

It is an uneasy peace when the expansion of a nation's fighting forces is advertised as the personal and material concern of even its humblest citizens.

Misdirected Efforts.

The President is evidently anxious to prevent any further rise in prices which would sharply increase living costs and create serious economic maladjustments. His concern is justified. But his efforts to avert the threatened danger are to a large extent misdirected.

The fumbling now apparent to all is due to failure to distinguish between specific price advances attributable to special causes and a general inflationary advance in the price level. Inveighing against high prices for metals, intimating that the market for producers' goods has been overstimulated by Government buying, and invoking the anti-trust laws against alleged monopolies, all these gestures merely distract attention from the basic cause of disquiet—the unbalanced state of the budget.

Regulatory laws applicable to business may tend to raise or to lower the prices of certain commodities. But it is certain that no kind of legislation can prevent catastrophic price increases if inflation once gets full headway. On the other hand, if the consumer is protected against this dread contingency, isolated price advances are not particularly alarming. Moreover, legal remedies can always be invoked to prevent extortionate or monopolistic charges.

There is no legal remedy, however, for the price advances resulting from monetary and credit inflation. In every country where inflation has done its deadly work, governments have tried vainly to arrest the progressive rise in prices. Legal fixation of maximum prices, exemplary punishment of so-called profiteers, indeed every sort of official and unofficial pressure has proved unavailing. When the amount of money or of credit substitutes for money is expanding rapidly, without a correspondingly rapid increase in goods produced, the upsurge of prices is irresistible. To legislate against it is no more effective than to legislate against a rise of temperature in summertime.

The President will make a mistake, therefore, if he attaches excessive importance to current advances in the prices of certain commodities. Present widespread uneasiness provides ample evidence of the realization that this is a superficial approach. But by concentrating his efforts upon effecting cuts in Federal expenditures, to bring the budget into balance, Mr. Roosevelt would be attacking the evil at its source.

Continued deficits, financed either by borrowing or by issuing fiat money, must lead ultimately to uncontrollable inflation. Against price rises from this cause no effective protection has yet been or ever will be devised.

Harlan Sociology.

"Industrial despotism" is the popular explanation for the sickening stories coming out in the hearings of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee. But that is an indictment, not an explanation. Murder and terrorism under the cloak of the law demand a consideration of the sociology that produces them.

The World War brought Harlan County to its present sorry condition. Coal prices soared and operators raced into the Kentucky hills to open up every available carbon seam. To dig out the wealth, they called on the natives of the region—for the most part mountain folk with very primitive backgrounds. Given fabulous wages, they indulged deeply their inherited tastes for hard drinking and fancy shooting. Harlan was a tough county when it was prosperous as never before.

Then came the depression and with it a set of freight differentials that seemed to favor the northern mines. Harlan was hard hit. The fact that the operators had installed stores and living quarters only aggravated the misery of the county when orders came to shut down. The small mines were the first to go and the first to feel the presence of union organizers, some sincere and others who saw in the miners' despair a golden opportunity to promote their own interests. Some of the larger mines were able to calm the discontent by their larger reserves. Furthermore, many of their employes were of immigrant stock not easily excited by arguments of workingmen's rights.

But generally throughout Harlan, the lines between operators and unionists became tightly drawn. And where guns had always been prominent adjuncts of daily life, they continued to be. Hence the unsavory records of the deputies appointed by the county sheriff—it takes hard men to handle guns. Hence, too, the accounts of bribery and intimidation. And hence such tragedies as the death of the 10-year-old Musick boy, caught in a volley fired from the dark and intended for his father, a union member.

None of this can be condoned. And the indictment of "industrial despotism" holds. For whatever the backwardness of the people of Harlan, the mine operators had and have no justification in exploiting it. Barbarity is never an excuse for more barbarity.

An Approach To Realism.

The compromise neutrality resolution, now presented to the two houses of Congress for immediate action, has the virtue of not placing the Administration in a strait-jacket. Indeed it gives the President more than a little leeway to pursue a constructive policy for peace.

It has the additional virtue of being, admittedly, a temporary and not a permanent measure. One of its principal provisions—that concerning trade with belligerents in commodities not automatically embargoed on the outbreak of a foreign war—expires in two years. Then, no doubt, the whole problem of neutrality legislation will be given renewed and more intelligent airing.

In both of these particulars the present bill constitutes a real improvement on the measure originally passed by the Senate. That, in turn, was something of an improvement on the kind of law urged by the extreme advocates of mandatory neutrality.

The bill that has emerged from the conference committee continues the existing ban on loans to belligerents and also perpetuates the present embargo on the sale of arms, munitions and implements of war to combatants. The extension of this embargo to cover essential raw materials is, however, made discretionary with the President.

If he finds such a step necessary to preserve the peace and neutrality of the United States he can order such trade placed on a "cash and carry" basis. At his discretion, too, this provision can be suspended with respect to Canada. The measure also prohibits Americans from traveling on the vessels of belligerent states and makes it unlawful for any American vessel engaged in commerce with any belligerent state to be armed.

Should war break out, therefore, the President would be in a position to act or to refrain from acting in imposing the "cash and carry" system. If the war should be small and localized no good purpose would be served in placing such an obstacle in the way of American trade. On the other hand the power to do just that, in order to safeguard American peace and neutrality, would always be in his hands.

That this bill, or any other neutrality measure, could of itself keep the United States at peace is, of course, extremely doubtful. In a thousand ways our fate is linked with that of other nations. Only if the world generally remains at peace can the United States be sure of peace. Insofar as the conference bill is isolationist in its intent and its basic philosophy it rests on false grounds. Moreover, in permitting no discrimination to be made between aggressor and victim, it does violence to the spirit of the Kellogg pact which this Nation sponsored and which we should seek to keep alive.

Yet, all things considered, the bill now before Congress is a reasonable compromise and should be passed before the existing law expires, on May 1. At least it avoids the worst pitfalls of mandatory neutrality legislation.

During the next two years the process of education in the realities of the world situation, and our own place in it, must go on. By that time the defeatist attitude toward the problem of peace, ironically stimulated by professional pacifists, may vanish. It is already losing strength. The present neutrality bill, whatever its defects, is encouraging evidence of this.

Workers For Peace.

Of all the nations of Europe, none can with greater reason lay claim to the distinction of being civilized than those of Scandinavia.

These northern lands are among the most profoundly and intelligently peaceful in Europe. Because of that they have again and again manifested their devotion to the ideal of collective security as embodied in the League of Nations. Yet, as realists, they know that for the time being the League ideal is in eclipse while the war spirit runs riot over the continent.

It is not surprising, then, that without any idea of establishing an alliance, the four northern democracies of Europe have for some years been working closely together both in the field of economic and political affairs. Along with Belgium and the Netherlands they are seeking to breathe new life into the Oslo convention, which seeks to free trade between its participants. And, at Helsingfors, last week, the foreign Ministers of Sweden, Denmark, Norway and Finland decided to establish regular scheduled meetings for the examination of problems of common concern.

It is an interesting phenomenon to see the small nations of Europe showing the more determination to preserve peace as the great powers arm. The Balkan states, composing once the most troublesome area in Europe, are at present living in an atmosphere of real harmony. Belgium is seeking to return to the neutrality it once enjoyed. Austria is trying to achieve real independence both from Germany and Italy; co-operation is also the rule among the small Baltic republics.

The same instinct is now moving the Scandinavian kingdoms and Finland to strengthen their co-operation in behalf of peace. In the midst of so many manifestations of international turmoil such symptoms become the more encouraging.

A 'round-the-world good-will flight that would interest us most would be one by the Dove of Peace.

Save The Cherry Trees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "No More Cherry Blossoms" was reprinted in today's Chicago Tribune.

It looks as though we had better start a "Campaign for the Saving of Cherry Trees."

Don't the people of Washington realize how important those trees are? They even affect wedding dates away out here in Illinois. That statement is not far fetched at all. My own anniversary is April 12—April 12 having been selected several years ago as a "good date for seeing the cherry blossoms before returning home." Believe it or not, it's true.

And what's more, I'm saving what I can so that our young son may see Washington at an earlier age than I did, and we wouldn't even consider visiting Washington in any month other than April—to see the cherry blossoms.

To let some "antique" architectural plan interfere with those trees is nothing short of idiotic. I hope you run a box on your front page every day until you raise such a furore that that plan will be changed, anyway.

RENA ANDERSON OHLIN
Chicago, Ill., April 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The contribution in your columns, signed "Think-Think-Think" will hardly impress those of us that do use our minds.

Since when has concrete become permanent? The processes of Nature continue eternally, whereas lifeless marble is doomed to disintegration, even when used to supplant cherry blossoms!

Shakespeare truly writes:

"Time's glory . . . is to ruinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers;
To fill with worm holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things. . . .
To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water drops.

E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH
Washington, April 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It appears some of the solons on Capitol Hill need the service of a psychiatrist. They are even kept awake at night planning how to spend the taxpayers' money, especially for memorials, of one kind or other. The climax is reached in the proposed Thomas Jefferson Memorial, which has produced bad cases of hysteria.

Why not let common sense prevail? Why not just stop, or postpone, for the present, all this memorial business, when the United States Treasury is empty, and it all has to be done on borrowed money? I am sure Jefferson would be the last person who would want money squandered for something just to look at, when he already has the grandest memorial enshrined "in the hearts of his countrymen."

RICHARD J. PAHNKE.
Washington, April 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If "Think-Think-Think," who holds forth in The Post of April 24, would do some of it, he might arrive at a destination. He has only to read the soundest objections so far voiced against a superfluous memorial. He would not even find mention of the cherry blossoms.

He would find that a main kick slams the replacing of a going park with another sample of man's "incomparable" genius. Another is the opposition to the idea of any more stone piles at a time of pretended economy in government, when it seems the squanderers have at last learned their lesson.

Pity For Canute.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My heart is torn with sympathy for our dear friend Canute, whose pitiful letter I have just read in this morning's Post. I suspect there are as many as 3,000,000 like him in this country of ours who enjoy an income of about $5,000 a year. It is heartbreaking to contemplate his woeful plight, when so many of his neighbors and relations have been lifted from their positions of dire need to the affluence represented by annual incomes approximating 10 to 20 per cent of his own by the same insidious policy which is causing him so much pain and discomfort. I can view his unfortunate position only with tearful eye and sorrowful heart. As a remedy I would recommend that he try the bread line for a few months, and after that experience he might be able to worry along on his lousy $5,000 income. HUGH EVERETT.
Washington, April 26.

The Hospital Campaign.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the name of Garfield Memorial Hospital I desire to express our appreciation of the articles that have appeared in your paper written by Hope Ridings Miller, which set forth most appealingly the needs of the hospitals of the City of Washington.

We congratulate you on having a person with such a clear vision of the situation assist in this matter.

FRANCIS J. EISENMAN, M. D.
Washington, April 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has been with great interest I have read the articles appearing in your paper written by Hope Ridings Miller on "Health Crusade Week."

My first reaction to any kind of a "drive" was most unfavorable in view of the emphasis placed by the Community Chest on the assurance that subscriptions to the Chest would avoid the necessity of further drives, and eliminate any further campaigns.

However, after reading your articles and realizing the shortage of funds pledged to the Community Chest for the current year, I am made to thoroughly understand that this is not a drive or campaign of any description, but an urgent appeal to those in a position to assist further.

I trust these articles may be as convincing to others as to myself, and take this opportunity to express appreciation of The Post's attitude in assisting worthy civic causes at all times.

Double-Deck Buses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The double-deck buses are gone from Sixteenth street and it is with genuine regret that I note their passing. For 13 years they plied their way on the "Avenue of Presidents" and many a dime they collected for the company's coffers. The last trip was made on Monday, April 19, with the "nice dispatcher from Eighth street" at the wheel.

Although I did not know them until the days of their senility the double-deck buses proved a great enjoyment to me and, in spite of their creaks and squeaks and sudden lurchings, I looked forward with pleasure to my daily ride and to drinking in the fresh morning air. An air of informality and camaraderie prevailed among the upper-deck passengers, the people on one bus waving to those on another as they passed; and smoking was an added attraction.

Of course nothing can be done about it now—the buses have been relegated to a parking lot in the southeast section and replacements have been made with new equipment—but let it not be said that no voice was raised in praise of our late friends, the double-deckers!

A Filipino's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a Filipino Catholic and an independent, I agree with the point in Mr. O'Grady's letter that Georgetown University, in conferring an honorary degree on President Manuel L. Quezon, of the Philippine Commonwealth, is not only getting rather political, but also extending its cloak of approval upon the dictatorial regime that is being established in the Philippines.

President Quezon had time to go to Mexico and rave over its President and government, which are the persecutors of the Catholics in that country, but didn't have time to attend the Eucharistic Congress in Manila. Now he goes to Europe to see the dictators over there—Kemal Pasha, Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin.

President Quezon came here on a government appropriation of $75,000 to talk of trade matters, and after two months a committee was appointed to study the situation, and that's about the only thing he has done since his arrival. He keeps his headquarters in New York City, while his duties are in Washington.

We Filipinos appeal to the President of the United States, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, his wife and a leader by herself, to help us make our own government, to give us a square deal. President Quezon is spending too much money, too disproportionately for what he is doing and not doing, while many of us are on the verge of starvation. We are sure that $75,000 is about finished now, and more money will be appropriated. Please, Mr. Roosevelt, direct that justice is done us by President Quezon. We believe in speeches no more. SANTIAGO VALDEZ, Chauffeur.
Washington, April 23.

"The Orgy Of Spending."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is evident to careful observers that the New Deal is leading down a blind alley. The country has been overwhelmed with promises unfulfilled, and doubtless to remain unfulfilled. The apparent prosperity that is so much harped upon is the result of extravagant spending of public funds wrung from the pockets of the taxpayers.

Those who are spending this money will, of course, be popular as long as the spending continues. That is what they were elected for. The fact that private business is being slowly strangled as a result of Government entering into business is of minor importance. The cry continues to be, "Let the spending go on!"

The national elections of 1932 and 1936 were won on the "hand-out issue." To be supported at public expense was what was wanted, and is still wanted. Those who voted in favor of that issue, whether for the purpose of securing a place at the pie-counter where government pap is served, or for relief in other ways, expect a continuance of the spending. One is reminded of this state of mind when seeing the name "Roosevelt" on automobiles.

But can this heretofore unheard of squandering of public money continue and not result in national disaster? Every discerning person must know that it can not. But the orgy of spending will doubtless go on until the end of the blind alley is reached. W. H. P.
Washington, April 24.

Days Of Wickedness.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many men are calling themselves God in defiance of truth and honesty as Jesus foresaw in Matthew 24. We see this prophecy being fulfilled before our very eyes, which makes us know we are living in the last days of wickedness.

There has been a lot of this so-called "Father Divine" publicity in the papers which we know defames the name of God. Elder Michaux says Divine will have to walk across the Potomac to prove he is God. That comes well from one who claims to be a minister of God. He does not have to perform this stunt to honest, sincere people who desire righteousness because they really see that all such are servants of the devil. E. M. STEPHENS.

Georgetown Gardens Build A House.

GEORGETOWN, with its Old-World charm, has become famous as a unique garden section of Washington. Besides such historic estates as Tudor Hall, Dumbarton Oaks, Evermay and the Sevier mansion other smaller yet notably attractive houses have been revived and old gardens brought alive much as they were in the early days when Georgetown was a thriving little port on the Potomac and no national capital existed on the nearby swampy ground. An almost positive cult of garden-conscious people have been making much of herb borders, hardy perennials, espaliered fruit trees and deciduous shrubs or evergreens, so that Georgetown flourishes in succeeding seasons with color or greenness, and has beguiled more and more householders into its endearing neighborhood. Georgetown has done a lot for Washington.

But the discovery of Georgetown as a charming residential section has worked a certain hardship in this way: every bit of ground in the community has become exceedingly precious. All the smaller houses, even the very tiny ones that can boast so much as a 20-foot courtyard in the rear, have been eagerly seized and remodeled—the courtyards have become enchanting little gardens—yet many people who 25 years ago could afford to have a backyard for their children to play in are now forced into apartments, most of which are over the stores on M street and Wisconsin avenue.

It is for the small children of those apartment dwellers, where mothers frequently are away at work all day, that the Georgetown Children's House has come into existence. Seven years ago the proceeds from the Georgetown Garden Pilgrimage proved sufficient for the salary of a trained social worker. A room was loaned by the Salvation Army at their center on Jefferson street. St. John's Parish Hall was used for summer programs. Then in 1933 the small rented quarters at 3238 N street were secured.

The work grew. The Georgetown Children's House can take care of 20 children from 2 to 4 years of age. In addition to the all-day nursery school program which includes supervised play, music and rhythm classes, luncheon and naps, until mothers can call for their children, there are recreational classes for older children and for the mothers, too—music, home decorating and art classes—for mothers need a little fun sometimes.

In case anyone wonders at the need for this Children's House, an actual count taken recently gave 85 white children of preschool age whose families are on relief in Georgetown, with the Emergency Relief Nursery School caring for only 25. And the Children's House has proved its worth in that the Community Chest has, since 1935, been giving it a helping hand.

Now there has come an increasing need for luncheon and afternoon care for children in the lower school grades whose mothers are employed all day. So the Georgetown Children's Committee knew that the little house must grow into a larger house and financial aid must be secured somehow. Just down the block from the present home is a big brick house with dignified, spacious rooms, long sunny porches and a playground almost twice the size of the present one. This house, at 3224 N street, now belongs to the Georgetown children.

The next step is remodeling—plans are under way—a new heating plant, adequate plumbing, a few doors and windows cut for convenience and additional sunshine, fresh paint and paper, and the big verandas screened for afternoon naps. Money is needed for all this repair work, and money will be found somehow, through garden gates or other channels, and it is hoped before another sultry summer falls upon Washington there may be a cooler, cleaner spot in which little children may find the care and service that is their due.

Next Saturday all those who are planning to tour the Georgetown gardens—when the Georgetown Garden Pilgrimage gets under way—will have an opportunity to visit the present Children's House at 3238 N street and the new house close by, and see for themselves this safe, happy nursery school where over a dozen youngsters are busy playing together, guarded in body and mind from the harmful effects of idleness and misguided play.

Yes, Georgetown has done a lot for Washington. Now Washington has a chance to do something for Georgetown. E. P. W.

Since Union-Suit Days.

A well-turned blonde with some or all of her clothes off has always been news, of course, and has been advertising as well for just about 25 years. You remember the daring ad that began it all—showing mother, father, and junior as jovial as could be in knitted union suits. Junior and father rapidly dropped out of that picture and pretty soon burial vaults and Portland cement were customarily advertised by means of a debutante in scanties. Now the scanties are gone; soaps, cosmetics, towels and nearly everything else that can or can't be associated with a bathtub are advertised by the debutante clad only in an occasional patch of shadow.

Politico-Sporting Racket.

THE TAX EXEMPT STATESMEN of the New York Legislature are still fumbling in the citizens' clothes for $20,000,000 with which to balance the $1,000,000-a-day budget. But up to this writing they have not found it advisable to interfere with the book-making industry, which is a politico-sporting racket linking the Government to the underworld of crime.

The bookmaking racket is a political concession to a few professional gamblers with strong political connections, and it handles upward of $300,000,000 a year, of which the gamblers retain at least $45,000,000 for expenses and profit. The expenses are not to be estimated without access to the most intimate account books of the gamblers, but it is reasonable to assume that they are largely political expenses, because no group can expect to obtain an exclusive State concession in a $300,000,000 yearly business just for love.

The gambling concession belongs to the State itself, and if the pari-mutuel machines were adopted, it probably would yield more than enough to cover the $20,000,000 deficit.

The case is local to New York, but the calm, defiant nerve of the State Legislature in frisking the citizens for more money while forbearing to disturb the gamblers is more or less typical of State Legislatures.

• • • •

WHILE PUBLIC ATTENTION is concentrated on Washington and national affairs, they meet in comparative stealth, and the citizens do not know what has been done to them until the tax bills are due. However, the protection of the gambling racket by the New York Legislature is a little more raw than most such jobs, because it is maintained at a time when the statesmen are pretending to be very sorry indeed about the necessity of lifting $20,000,000 off the people.

There are now 23 States which have legal racing, and 21 of them have legalized mutuels, while New York is the only one that forbids the mutuels by law. Most States take a percentage of every dollar wagered through the machines, and many of them also collect the breakage, or nickel-and-penny money.

In Maryland the mutuel tax is only 1 per cent, but the tracks pay a license fee of $6,000 a day, and there is a further yield from a net revenue tax. Ohio, with a comparatively small gambling industry, collects from 10 per cent to 30 per cent of the money wagered through the machines, raising the percentage as the volume of business rises. Rhode Island, with a 3 per cent mutuel tax, collected $1,193,000 last year, and Florida, during the season just closed, derived about the same amount in mutuel taxes, which applied to the dog races and jai alai as well as the horse tracks.

But New York, with the greatest volume of gambling in the country, did not receive a dime last year from this source, although the bookmakers retained at least $45,000,000 out of the total business. All New York collected was $487,000, and this was picked up in the form of a tax on gate receipts.

The New York Legislature has now passed a bill to permit dog racing, a notorious racket operated by the same types and many of the same individuals who operate the slot machines in various parts of the country.

UNLIKE THE HORSE TRACKS of the State, however, the dog tracks will be permitted to operate a racket known as the phony mutuels, but without either supervision or tax. This means that the operators of the phony mutuels will be permitted to pay any odds they care to, and that means a license from the Legislature for groups of well-known criminals to rob the people.

The State Legislature doesn't explain its conduct in these matters. It does not have to explain yet, because nobody was paying much attention to the Legislature what with the Supreme Court disturbance, the sitdown strikes and one thing and another.

But it was only within the last week that the public began to hear about the tax potentialities of the legalized rackets of the horse and dog tracks, and the victims, doubtless, will have something to say to the statesmen when they realize that the $20,000,000 deficit could have been met by withdrawing the racket's exclusive gambling concession, which is actually the property of the taxpayers.

Incidentally, the same Legislature has also neglected to pass a law recommended by the Governor to apply the State income tax to its own salaries and several hundred other tax-exempt public salaries ranging between $18,000 and $28,000 a year.

There have been many raw Legislatures, but this one is out for the championship.

Italy's Dual Role

Writer Says Duce's Mediterranean Policy Endangers Italy's Position In Europe; Germany A Rival, Not Ally.

By Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Rome.

ITALIAN foreign policy strikes here and there with bewildering rapidity. While a new accord with Yugoslavia reaches fruition to the east, pointing toward a happier chapter in Adriatic relations, Mussolini follows the Kaiser's footsteps to the south in proclaiming his special interest in Mohammedans, and Italy's armies to the west bear the brunt of Fascist intervention in Spain. Other governments seem in comparison to function far more slowly and far less brilliantly in their foreign policy. Mussolini again is "marching straight ahead" to his objectives, but where does his road lead?

This road cannot be discerned from scrutiny of short tacks this way and that, or from choruses of scorn or adulation which a regimented press switches overnight toward this Nation or the other. It is necessary to go back to fundamentals to see the long-term trend and its relation to the future of Europe and the future of Italy. Is Mussolini in the process of making himself the arbiter of a balance of power which may guarantee peace for Italy and for Europe, or is he mortgaging his country for a few brief years of Caesardom?

Italy stands at present in an offensive relationship to France and the British Empire. If she is to expand further in the Mediterranean, her growth must inevitably be at the expense of these two powers. If a new Roman empire is to extend around "Mare Nostrum," as the series of stone maps near the Forum suggest, its provinces must be carved from territories which now fly the tricolor of France and the Union Jack.

Past and present Italian aggressions evidence this fact. The conquest of Ethiopia has raised a potential threat to Egypt and the Suez Canal, which might become actual with the creation of a huge colonial army and air force. Even though Egypt is now to become a member of the League of Nations, and hence no longer the sole responsibility of Great Britain, the Egyptian interests of Britain and France far outweigh those of the rest of the world, and the Suez Canal is the primary artery of the British Empire.

The existing Italian aggression in Spain points in the same direction since a Franco victory aided largely by Italian troops may give Rome a decisive influence in a Fascist Madrid. If the Spanish satellite can then be controlled as Italy hopes, France and Great Britain will face a strategic threat to their communications with their overseas empires.

Defensive Front Is To The North.

ITALY, HOWEVER, must also look to her defense. Here she must face in another direction since no realistic statesman could consider her in peril of a French or British attack. She need only fear a clash with these two powers if the initiative is taken by her Duce in the shape of another drive for military expansion.

Her defensive front is in the north, where only tiny Austria keeps the frontier of aggressive Nazi Germany from reaching the Alps. Despite the concentration of Italian energies on preparations for war, her national power is so inferior to that of the German Reich that she could not alone keep Austria free, or even insure her own future safety against German domination. She must, therefore, maintain her defensive front through the medium of foreign policy.

Mussolini, accordingly, is torn between two objectives, the necessity of protection against Germany and the luxury of Mediterranean expansion. The first he could attain by simple but unwelcome means. But he is seeking both at once an attempt dangerous to Europe and particularly dangerous to Italy.

If Italy were really content to be the "satisfied power," her Duce has proclaimed her, and were ready to forget hurt pride in the interests of national welfare, her future would not be difficult to assure. Her larger interests in central Europe are parallel with those of France and Great Britain since they would be imperilled by the Anschluss or the creation of a German Mittel-Europa. The Western democracies are her natural allies in any effort to keep Germany off the Alps.

Were it not for the Mediterranean ambitions awoken by Mussolini, his amour propre, and his constant need for personal prestige, Italy would be free to return to Stresa. The restoration of this "front" with Britain and France would guarantee her for the future the inestimable benefits she gained from the World War, liberation from the Alpine menace of a mightier northern power.

BUT MUSSOLINI has led his people on for 14 years with the promise of liberal grandeur and dominance. He must be a minor Caesar while he lives, at any cost, and Italy must play the part of a great power during these years, regardless of her relative national strength and resources and the final fate of her people. So protection from the inevitable German menace to the north is sought by more perilous means, which will leave him free to strike where he can at the British and French empires. These means are power politics in Central Europe and an uncertain partnership with the only European power which can endanger Italian independence.

History seems to show that any alliance of great powers works to the advantage of the stronger partner. There is already some evidence of this tendency in Central Europe in the Italian veto of Hapsburg restoration. It is stated here that this veto was a concession to Berlin, made as a necessary basis for the new accord with Yugoslavia. If true, this means that a diplomatic triumph was bought at a sacrifice of Italy's most vital long-term interest, since the German attraction for Austria is already powerful and seems destined to grow.

It is claimed in Rome that German and Italian expansionist ambitions are complementary rather than antagonistic; that Germany seeks dominion over Central Europe, while Italy aims to rebuild the Roman Empire around the Mediterranean. Both might, perhaps, pursue these aims in partnership for a number of years at the expense of the British Empire, France, Russia and the Little Entente. During these years Mussolini could play the Caesar, and perhaps even succeed in enlarging his empire by threats and pressure and without war. But what would be the end for Italy?

While Italy gained African territory and Mediterranean naval supremacy, Germany would dominate Central Europe and multiply her aggressive power. Then when Germany was ready to take Austria and the Alps, she would take them. Once more the Goths would threaten the Roman Empire from the north, and Italy would face the choice of becoming a satellite or a conquered province of a German Mittel-Europa.

Real Threat To Italy Is From German Side.

MUSSOLINI is now endangering Italy's future by building up the offensive power of Germany, since Germany alone in Europe has the power, the will and the central position necessary for continued Continental expansion. His present policies may, it is true, bring him glorious years of Caesardom, but only at the risk of finally destroying his country.

There is reason to believe, therefore, that this dangerous Berlin-Rome "axis" may not last, and that Italy may, for her own self-preservation, decide to return to Stresa. Rumor has it everywhere that this alliance is already an unhappy and mutually suspicious combination, linked primarily by parallel interests in Spain. It is also generally known that the British government favors a real rapprochement with Italy, but is blocked by the reaction of the British people toward repeated Italian violations of international law.

When the Spanish civil war ends we may see another switch of Italian policy, particularly if her diplomatic activity in Central Europe fails to make her position beyond the Alps as strong as that of her mightier partner. Such a switch would seem necessary to assure the permanent safety of Italy in Europe. The obstacles to it are not national welfare, but dictatorial ambition, pride and prestige.

Incipient Uprising Crushed in Brazil

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, April 28 (U.P.).—President Getulio Vargas, backed by Army officers and political leaders throughout Brazil, today crushed an incipient uprising in Rio Grande do Sul State, which threatened to plunge the country into another bloody revolution.

Gov. Flores da Cunha of Rio Grande do Sul, possessor of a strong private army, was ousted by President Vargas after state leaders had warned the president of "warlike preparations" on the part of the governor.

Just Barbarism

By Barnet Nover

The Destruction Of Guernica.

IN THE GRIM fighting taking place for the possession of Bilbao, metropolis of the Basque provinces and one of the leading industrial cities of Spain, the insurgents and their German and Italian allies have practically stopped at nothing.

It has been a case of Schrecklichkeit without stint or limit. The cruelties attributed to Attila, when the leader of the Huns was in one of his moods of insensate fury, have now been exceeded, though in cold blood, by Franco's henchmen and the emissaries of Hitler and Mussolini in their war against the Basques. A case in point was Monday's bombardment of Guernica.

• • • •

GUERNICA, in some respects, is to the Basques what Mecca is to the followers of the prophet, what Jerusalem is to the Jews, what the shrine at Ise is to the Japanese.

It is the cradle of the Basque race. That virile people have managed through the centuries to keep alive their unique language and culture, their devotion to liberty, their ardent Catholicism and their inextinguishable sense of separateness. It was at Guernica, under the "Guenikako Arbalo," the National Oak, that the Basque Deputies, in their bright kerchiefs and blue "boina" caps, used to meet in the old days of the Diet of Viscaya and in our own times.

A city of 70,000, recently increased by the influx of 3,000 refugees from Durango and other towns previously laid waste by the insurgents, its military importance is nil. To be sure, on its outskirts are to be found a factory producing war material and two barracks harboring small garrisons. But neither the factory nor the garrison were of much importance and, oddly enough, were spared in the bombardment.

Only, incidentally, could the destruction of Guernica be said to have the slightest value in the struggle for Bilbao. It was, on Monday, well behind the lines anyway. And it was an unfortified town.

• • • •

MONDAY WAS market day at Guernica, as it has been since time immemorial. Despite the war, drawing so very close to their lands, peasants from the surrounding countryside flocked into the city to sell their wares. Old habits die hard. Besides, one has to make a living, war or no war. And men, women, and children must eat.

It was a sunny, beautiful day. A peaceful day, too, at least during the morning and early afternoon. But at 4:30 the church bells began to toll. It was the previously agreed-on warning to the people to seek cover: the rebel airplanes were approaching. The people of Guernica remembered only too well the wanton bombardment of Durango, another unfortified town, on March 31.

What followed constitutes as black a page as has been written in modern times, even in the sanguinary history of this cruelest of civil wars.

• • • •

A FEW MINUTES after the church bells had begun ringing and the frightened multitude had been shepherded to places of safety by priests and others, the bombardment began.

At first, says G. L. Steer of the New York Times, only a single plane—a German bomber—was engaged in this lethal activity. Six bombs were dropped, followed by a shower of grenades.

It was just the beginning. Soon more planes flew over the city and then still more. For the next three hours the city and its inhabitants were subjected to unbelievable punishment for the crime of being in loyalist territory, and the mistake of pursuing their traditional ways.

The bombardment was systematic. One part of the city was laid waste after another and nothing was spared. Schools, hospitals, churches, flocks of sheep, individual farmhouses—all were subjected to the rain of death and destruction against which there was no real protection.

Those who took to the high road to Bilbao were mowed down by low flying planes pouring machine-gun bullets into the refugees. And when night fell the whole city was in flames, and hundreds, and perhaps thousands had been killed by shells and bullets, by raging flames and the collapse of structures.

• • • •

TO WHAT PURPOSE? One object, undoubtedly, was to terrorize the population. But that object had been accomplished long before the bombardment ceased.

Another object was to give the Basques an object lesson. Gen. Franco has just proclaimed a unitary state. That meant that, should the rebels win, provincial autonomy of the kind for which the Basques have always fought would be a thing of the past. And no doubt, the insurgent leaders believe that by destroying the cradle of Basque culture they would be taking the first step in the direction of wiping out Basque separatism.

Yet such an objective could, in itself, hardly have appealed to the foreign Fascist fliers with Gen. Mola. To them one must believe from the available evidence it was all a cold-blooded business of military tactics, a problem in present-day military strategy to be worked out not on paper but with buildings, historic monuments, human beings as the Guinea pigs. To them it was a practice effort.

Says Mr. Steer:

"The rhythm of this bombing of an open town was, therefore, logical—first, hand grenades and heavy bombs to stampede the population, then machine gunning to drive them below, next heavy incendiary bombs to wreck houses and burn them over their victims."

In the old days, the world found it possible to develop considerable moral indignation over a Dreyfus case, a Zabern affair, cases involving an injustice to one individual or a group. We have since become apathetic to suffering, to slaughter, to barbarism on a wholesale scale. And some of our universities even send delegates to be lectured to on the virtues of barbarism. It is not the least shocking aspect of a ghastly situation.

Shakespeare

By William Lyon Phelps

Birth and Death.

Today, the twenty-third of April, is Shakespeare's birthday and deathday. He may have been born on the twenty-second, but he certainly died on the twenty-third (1564—1616), and both at Stratford.

He was the greatest dramatist who ever lived both in the excellence of his characterizations and in his language; and he is often called the Perfect Mask, because he entered so wholly into his individual characters that no one can prove absolutely what his own views were.

• • • •

In a conversation I had once with the German dramatist, Gerhart Hauptmann, he told me that he did not himself express definite opinions in his plays; "but any one who reads half a dozen of my dramas ought to be able to find out what kind of a person I am."

Well, we should give a good deal to know what kind of a person was William Shakespeare. Therefore I earnestly recommend a new book on this particular theme by a great Shakespeare scholar, Caroline F. E. Spurgeon, of England.

Her new book is called "Shakespeare's Imagery and What It Tells Us." It is published by the Macmillan Co., New York.

• • • •

Do you know that she has found a new method of approach? She has made a careful collection of his metaphors and similes, because they do show the things he knew and liked and was familiar with; and I think all readers will be interested in the chapter where she compares his figures of speech with those used by Francis Bacon and by Christopher Marlowe. They are extremely good evidence and they help us to understand Shakespeare the man. This book is worth tons of ordinary literary criticism.

Incidentally, if one will study the character of Horatio, in the play "Hamlet," I think one will find out a good deal about William Shakespeare.

Our Radio Spectrum

Increasing Importance Of Hertzian Waves For Commercial And Official Communications Makes Conferences Important.

By A. G. West.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THIS IS a banner spring in the world of radio. This week, for example, the Institute of Radio Engineers and the International Scientific Radio Union is meeting here. Also in Washington the U. S. Chamber of Commerce is holding its annual meeting, with appointment due of some ten delegates to represent American business men at the ninth annual Congress of the International Chamber of Commerce at Berlin in June. There a battle to free the American cable code rates from European slavery, will be on the agenda. And on Saturday, the American delegation starts off for Bucharest to attend a radio parley convening in early June. Finally, there have just returned to the United States our radio envoys to Havana, where a broadcast conference of Pan-American nations was held over Easter.

With all this activity in domestic and international radio affairs, cries have been going up from the Senate and House that monopoly wolves are eating up poor little Red Ridinghood Radio Broadcasting. But the radio rockets that have been going up from Capitol Hill for the past six weeks or more, over the delicate problem of how best to investigate the radio industry or the Federal Communications Commission or both with the fewest political repercussions, have not yet flared over the yawning pit of radio communications that is the chief danger to be faced at the conference to be held at Cairo next February.

Entertainment Programs Only One Use For Air Waves.

BROADCASTING, which permits music and other entertainment over the air, is merely one phase of activity of the Hertzian waves. The transmission of messages by radio, which is gradually replacing the older forms of telegraph and cable, is vital to the trade of a nation in time of peace and the more swiftly such messages can be transmitted overseas the greater the financial reward and prestige.

Radio or cable or telegraph messages are known as "communications." They have rapidly become an important part of the life of modern nations. They are, in effect, its life-blood against the rising fever of foreign competition. Indeed, it is probably not too much to say that no nation need hope to survive today in peacetime or in war, unless that nation is placed so that it can maintain superior international communications for trade and security.

One major and at least one minor assault are being planned against the present American supremacy in the forthcoming half year. The first attack against our world trade will be made in late November, when the trap is sprung to share United States radio frequencies on a new national allocation now being worked out in co-operation with Government officials and various Pan-American nations. Some 23 governments of the Western Hemisphere will be present at Havana to negotiate the new radio broadcast treaty, which has finally been agreed upon as a result of the harsh treatment suffered by American interests at Madrid in 1932.

The real assault against the United States' present allocation on the spectrum may be expected at the meeting of the International Telecommunications Conference at Cairo. This conference meets once in five years, and unlike the various technical radio and telegraph parleys which convene more often, has administrative powers that may affect American radio and cable users, if changes are made in the international treaty ratified May 1, 1934.

U. S. Not A Signatory Of Wire Telegraph Treaty.

THIS NATION did not sign the section of that treaty relating to cable and telegraph regulations because of the difference between the American system of private commercial ownership of cables and telegraph companies, as opposed to governmental ownership abroad.

But within the last month or so the official proposals for the Cairo conference have reached Washington and are now being translated from French, the official language, for study by the State Department and Congress and officials of the FCC. The American proposal was sent to Berne late in January, 1937, in which it was stated that as a result of meetings of interested American users which had been sponsored by the FCC, that the United States may be prepared to give serious consideration at Cairo to that part of the treaty hitherto left unsigned as regards the governments, if the portion concerning operation and management of the communication carriers is segregated in the treaty.

At the 24 technical meetings at the Krolloper in June, when the International Chamber of Commerce assembles in Berlin, the implications of this proposal will be clearly seen. A new pamphlet has been specially prepared for this conference, under the direction of Chauncey D. Snow, manager of the American section, which is the first simple and easily understood document ever made available to the average taxpayer on the knotty subject presented by the international cable regulations. It should present an effective argument against higher costs in communications.

The price paid for a cable to Rio is inevitably reflected later on in the cost of a cup of coffee at the average American's breakfast table. His suit of woolen material, imported from Australia, also may bear this secret and invisible tax, as it is more expensive for an American to cable from New York to the Far East than for a British patron to cable from London to Tokyo.

Bucharest Conference Will Prepare For Cairo.

MEMBERS of the American delegation sailing for Bucharest have declared that only technical matters will be discussed at the meetings of the C. C. I. R., as the ponderous International Contative Committee is known. The fact remains, however, that at these foreign meetings the basic plan of battle is usually laid down. With Cairo on the spring horizon, it can be confidently expected that representatives from every important radio company and administration in the world will be present at Bucharest, as no one ever dares stay away because of the by no means remote possibility that some rival power might lay plans to commit mayhem on the radio spectrum of the missing comrade.

Unfortunately, such a thick cloud of deep and impenetrable scientific terms befogs the operations of the C. C. I. R. that little or nothing can be definitely learned of what actually happens on these foreign junkets. But if history repeats itself the United States will find itself fighting to hang on to every frequency it holds.

It is here that the attitude of Congress toward communications becomes important. Will the legislative branch of the Government appropriate enough money to defray the expenses of the most brilliant scientists in the United States to travel to Cairo to defend our radio spectrum? What is needed in these international brains contests known as radiotelegraph conferences are experts like Prof. Kennelly of Harvard, of Kennelly-Heaviside Layer fame. Inventors of note, like John Hays Hammond, jr., or Dr. Hoyt-Taylor, of the Bellevue Research Laboratory, and Hugo Leuteritz, the designer of aircraft radio.

With our trade at stake, in time of peace; with our security at stake, in time of war, can we afford to send less than the most gifted men this Nation owns, to defend our frontier in the radio spectrum?

Chiang's Elder Son Back From Soviet

Nanking, April 28 (AP).—Chiang Chin-ko, Elder son of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, after 12 years' residence in Soviet Russia has returned to China, it was disclosed today, and made his peace with his father.

The younger Chiang brought his Russian wife and their son and apparently had broken ties with the land of the Soviets, where he was considered a thorough-going Communist and where the press quoted him as "renouncing" his father and branding him a traitor to China.

Dedication Date For Chapels Set

Chapels in American military cemeteries in France will be dedicated May 30, Memorial Day, it was announced yesterday by Gen. Pershing, chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission.

Other memorials, erected in Europe by the United States to commemorate the services of the American forces there during the World War, will be dedicated between August 1 and 15. The principal ceremony will be August 1, at Montfaucon, France, where a memorial has been erected commemorating the Meuse-Argonne offensive. Remaining memorials will be dedicated during early August, except one near Chateau-Thierry, which will be dedicated early in October during the time when many members of the American Legion will be on a pilgrimage to France.

Symphony Orchestra Board Re-elects Thom

The board of directors of the National Symphony Orchestra Association re-elected Corcoran Thom president for another year at the annual meeting Monday. Other officers re-elected were Dr. William McClellan, vice president, and Walter Bruce Howe, secretary.

John Rowland Hill and Mrs. Oliver Strunk were named to fill vacancies on the board. The board also voted to increase its membership from 15 members to 20.

Neutrality Bill Compromise Faces Trouble

Mandatory Bloc in Senate Likely to Oppose 'Cash-Carry' Plan.

With the President given discretion to invoke a "cash-and-carry" neutrality policy during a two-year trial period, House and Senate conferees agreed finally yesterday on the form of a permanent neutrality law to supplant the law which expires Saturday.

Possibility of heated debate against the conference report lingered in the Senate, where the bloc of Senators who have insisted that the country adopt a policy of mandatory neutrality, under which the President would be forced to proclaim the cash-and-carry provisions, may yet decide to carry on their fight.

The agreement by the conferees was considered a sweeping victory for the House forces, led by Representative Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The McReynolds men, with the weight of the Administration's wishes behind them, succeeded in supplanting several mandatory provisions which the Senate had affirmed, with others in which the President will be allowed to make final decisions.

The Senate's mandatory bloc consists of Senators Nye, North Dakota, and Vandenberg, Michigan, Republicans, and Clark, Missouri; Pope, Idaho, and Bone, Washington, all Democrats. These legislators have consistently held to the theory that permanent peace could only be legislated for the Nation on a basis of inflexible law, under which Presidential discretion remains at a minimum. Other Senators opposing the bill included William E. Borah, Idaho Republican, who fought it on the grounds that the country was abandoning its traditional freedom of the seas policy.

Although the lines had not formed last night, it was generally believed that the mandatory bloc would not concede the final approval of the almost completely discretionary bill without a last-ditch struggle on the floor today. A prolonged battle with possibly a filibuster, might even force the upper body to adopt the resolution of Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, which would merely continue the present legislation for another two years, as the deadline on the law is Saturday.

Auditorium Group Meets Tomorrow

The Capital Auditorium Commission will hold its first meeting at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow in the Senate Office Building. It will be an executive session for the purpose of organization.

It is expected that the commission will initiate studies of costs of site and construction of an auditorium large enough to hold future inaugural ceremonies in when the weather prevents outdoor exercises.

Members of the commission are Secretary Ickes, Senators Connally (Democrat), of Texas, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, and Taylor (Republican), of Tennessee.

2 District Bills Win Approval

The House District Committee yesterday reported favorably with minor amendments bills to establish a real estate commission and to regulate barber shops.

It postponed action on another measure to regulate beauty shops because of discussion started by a number of women spectators.

Among the amendments made to the barber bill was insertion of a provision to empower the health department to control sanitary conditions.

Senate Gets Shrine Bill.

Albany, N. Y., April 28 (AP).—An appropriation of $50,000 for State acquisition of Lindenwald, Columbia County residence of Martin Van Buren, eighth President of the United States, is authorized in a bill approved today by the Assembly and sent to the Senate.

C. of C. Meeting Round Tables Hear Problems

Farming, Transportation Housing Among Topics Given Attention.

Farm problems, transportation, housing difficulties, and price control were among subjects of round-table discussion in connection with the national chamber of commerce meeting yesterday.

H. R. Tolley, administrator of the Federal farm program, told one group that officials hope to develop a long-time national farm program with funds now earmarked by Congress for existing AAA programs.

"History will probably note," he said, "that our lack of a farm policy prior to 1932, our blind reliance upon sheer competition to solve all problems, and our wasteful exploitation of precious resources were the gravest defects in twentieth century civilization."

"It would appear," he declared further, "that the time is ripe for more general use of the co-operative idea in agriculture, as well as in labor and business. Since 1932, agriculture has had experience with the benefits that come to farmers from pooling their energies in co-operative programs to combat price collapse, to fight drought and to conserve soil fertility."

Difficulties in the way of crop insurance were described by B. M. Bissell, president of the Hartford Fire Insurance Co., who said that "unforeseen and unpredictable difficulties and combinations of circumstances are likely to arise which will make the problem even more difficult than it now appears to be."

Lauds Wheat Crop Insurance.

However, Roy M. Green, of the Government's Bureau of Agricultural Economics, pointing to the widespread indorsement given wheat crop insurance said it "brings together private and public interests; individual prudence and a regard for the general welfare; personal thrift and social security. Moreover, it quiets fears and is thoroughly discouraging to crop gambling."

Kenneth Collins, vice president of Gimbel Brothers, Inc., denied that a retailer either "makes, breaks or fixes prices." The seller only "finds those levels which are acceptable to the public," he added, "and he purveys goods at those levels."

He expressed fear that buyers would not accept some of the prices which manufacturers have indicated are in prospect.

"The relative success in the past two years of bargain basements may hint at this as one solution," Collins said. "The retailer may, paradoxically, find that his very high price brackets prove fertile ground for exploitation because of the obviously increased purchasing power of those people who are again receiving dividends and other profit benefits from investments."

Discusses Air Transportation.

Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association, was enthusiastic over the progress of air transportation.

"Today," he said, "America stands first * * * We know that we must maintain this world leadership, otherwise we shall be squeezed out of those markets still remaining open to world trade."

William K. Jackson, vice president and general counsel of the United Fruit Co., described the tasks facing the new maritime commission in its determining of proper construction and operating subsidies to build up the American Merchant Marine.

John McC. Mowbray, of Baltimore, chairman of the housing committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, speaking of the housing program, said the goal should be "decent housing for every family, with home ownership made possible to every family of reasonably stable income expectation, whether that income is large or small."

tween management and labor, with labor responsible and disciplined, and Government mediating "in a wholly unbiased frame of mind."

Kenneth Collins, vice president of Gimbel Brothers, Inc., forecast an "acid test" for retailers next fall, in view of further price increases in the offing, that will bring levels which most merchants feel will not prove acceptable to the public.

Prevention of shortages of skilled labor, such as are reported now in some sections, by greater use of vocational training in the schools was proposed by John H. Zink, president of the Heat and Power Corporation, of Baltimore.

Transformation of the Arctic Ocean into a chilly Mediterranean, with airplanes landing and taking off on regular schedule was pictured by Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association, as a result of the spread of air transportation.

Sibleys Entertain.

Delegates last night were guests of President and Mrs. Harper Sibley and the vice presidents and their wives at a reception and dance in honor of past presidents of the chamber. Today there will be morning and afternoon general sessions and a luncheon meeting, with the annual dinner tonight being addressed by Sir Edward W. Beatty, of Montreal, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Picturing American enterprise as in peril from governmental trends, Jordan expressed hope for "a violent moral revulsion against delusion and deceit." He saw the absolute State replacing the enterprise principle and declared such a development "means the end of America."

"During the past four years," he continued, "its destruction has been attempted deliberately and systematically, by playing upon and capitalizing the weaknesses of business management itself, by exploiting the ignorance, inertia and envy of the masses * * * by mobilizing an immense army of dependents around delusive promises of security and prosperity at the hands of the state, and by constructing under the excuse of emergency a gigantic machinery of state action designed to * * * leave the American people permanently in the absolute power of the state."

Of the governmental mechanism which he charged had been created to destroy the enterprise principle, he said, "it is engineered out of error, forged out of falsehood, and driven by the power of mass delusion mobilized by demagoguery." Yet, he said, he saw nothing now strong enough to destroy it. "Even war, widespread labor disorder, inflation and depression," he added, "would only strengthen it and speed it up."

Expanding further, he declared:

"This is the truth, but what is the truth to the jesting Pilates of politics who today exploit the ignorance and superstititions of the masses and permit or provoke them to crucify the principles of personal freedom and responsibility which have given them the greatest prosperity and security they have ever known? What will ever wash their hands, and ours, of the consequences of this crime against the economic and moral welfare of our people?

Loans, Deposits Contrasted.

McLaughlin contrasted the rate of increase of bank loans and investments in the past four years, about $9,000,000,000 with the increase in bank deposits, about $15,000,000,000, in his discussion of easy money and credit expansion. In the six years preceding 1929, he said, the expansion of the two factors was "remarkably parallel." He pointed out also that in the 1922-29 period bank-credit expansion was largely in the form of loans, while recently it has been largely in the purchase of Government bonds.

He said "the deficit financing of the Federal Government has created many billions of dollars in bank deposits which constitute a potentially dangerous store of 'inflationary dynamite,'" and added that "another important cause for concern has been the heavy movement of foreign capital into this country, represented in tangible form by gold imports."

The suggestion that the Treasury lower the price of gold to stem the tide of imports was cited, but he declared that if the price were cut from $35 an ounce to $33, the entire half billion of "sterilized gold" would have to be transferred to the account backing the gold certificates held by the Federal Reserve banks.

Wants Broader Tax.

He declared the only practical method of balancing the budget is the British method of higher taxes and a broader base of taxation, "so that practically every citizen will pay a direct tax of some kind."

"When every citizen pays a direct tax in proportion to his means and income," he added, "then we can let the voters decide whether they prefer to have a high level of Government expenditures together with high taxes, or lower expenditures and lower taxes."

While conceding the possibility of controlling interest rates and keeping them low within a certain area, he said "this type of control has its price." Warning that excessive credit expansion, when there is an "oversize" base may come "when and as popular psychology is propitious," he added:

"Indeed, about the most which can be said about control of money rates and credit expansion at the present time is that we 'cannot eat our cake and have it.'"

Edie followed by expressing wonder how this Government, as well as Britain's administration, would be able to maintain "easy money" and curb a boom at the same time, an objective which he said both governments are pursuing.

Corporations Held "Collective."

McGrady, discussing employer-labor relations under the Wagner act recently upheld by the Supreme Court, declared that each corporation is a "vast collectivism" of stockholders, having collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing, and held labor was entitled to the same right.

He advised against "writing new laws," though the Chamber council is to vote today on a resolution adopted by a round-table conference, calling for amendment of the Wagner act to prohibit "unfair labor practices" as well as the existing ban on "unfair employer practices."

Praising the records of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organizatoin, for observing contracts, he urged that employers trust these leaders "before demanding incorporation of unions, and statutory fixation of pains and penalties." Labor leaders oppose incorporation as designed to "destroy" unions.

Litchfield suggested a program for industrial peace based on law and order, responsibility on both sides, understanding, mediation and fact-finding. He called for a revision of the "traditional governmental attitude and machinery in mediating labor disputes," adding that "mediation calls for the highest type of unbiased and public-spirited service."

He declared that even if mediation and conciliation fail, establishment and publication of the facts in a dispute will often help bring peace, and then, he said, "let us have a cooling-off period, during which the public can make up its mind and the disputing parties can perhaps gain a calmer view of their difficulties."

Delegates yesterday were turning to thoughts of the annual election today, and there was speculation that George H. Davis, Kansas City grain man, might be chosen to succeed Sibley as president.

Renaming of Library For Jefferson Asked

Dr. Gill, for years a physician here, pointed out that the library was begun with Jefferson's collection of books as a nucleus.

He said this would solve the memorial dispute, "thus saving millions of dollars, saving the cherry blossoms and performing a good deed."

G. U. Law Group Hears O'Mahoney

Senators Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, were speakers at a banquet at the Carlton Hotel Tuesday celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Georgetown Law Review. Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, who was to have spoken, was called out of town by a death in his family.

Other speakers were Capt. Joseph V. Dillon, editor of the Law Journal; Dr. Hugh Fegan, assistant dean of the law school, and Harold Gill Reuschlein, faculty adviser.

Director Arno B. Cammerer, of the National Park Service, states 80 to 100 per cent of the trees fringing the Tidal Basin would be eliminated by the landscaping plans prepared by John Russell Pope, architect for the memorial.

Secretary W. M. Kochenderfer, of the Washington Hotel Men's Association, describes the perennial blossom display as the Capital's No. 1 tourist drawing card.

Basin Site Approved.

Cammerer, who is executiv officer of the National Park and Planning Commission besides being head of the bureau which the Boylan commission has chosen as its building agent, pointed out that the planning body approved the Tidal Basin along with three available sites for the Jefferson memorial.

He brought out, under questioning, that the planners' chairman, Frederic A. Delano, was partial to Lincoln Park in East Capitol street. Other locations acceptable to the Delano commission are the south side of the Mall, between Seventh and Ninth streets, and the Anacostia reservation at the foot of East Capitol street.

The last-named possibility has been advocated consistently by Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, a member of the Boylan group, and the Mall is the choice of two other members, Senators Charles L. McNary and Augustine Lonergan.

Defending the Boylan commission's procedure, Cammerer reminded the Library Committee several appropriations were required to build the Lincoln Memorial. Nevertheless, Chairman Kent E. Keller's comment was that Congress probably would not have authorized a dime for the Jefferson project had it suspected the total cost would be over $3,000,000.

Cammerer estimated the complete job could be done for $5,000,000 to $6,000,000.

All estimates are based on Pope's plan, subject to modification, to divide the basin into three pools, extend Maryland avenue into West Potomac Park and rip out the Japanese cherry trees and a large number of shade trees.

Keller announced he would inform Congress of the ultimate cost of the project, which apparently would be three times the amount authorized, and "it's okay by me if it wants to spend $10,000,000 or any sum."

"But not with me," interrupted Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, a committee member and author of the resolution to prevent the Boylan commission from building at the basin.

Under questioning by Representative Compton I. White (Democrat), of Idaho, Cammerer disclosed not only that few, if any, of the cherry trees would survive the Pope scheme, but that only those under 3 inches in diameter could stand transplanting. Removal of the others would mean their death.

Representative Robert T. Secrest (Democrat), of Ohio, another committee member, said he has no objection to the proposed site if the memorial can be erected there without affecting materially the trees and the basin.

Representative Stefan warned that destruction of the cherry trees would cost the District $100,000,000 in tourist revenue in the next 10 or 12 years. The same line of argument was followed by Kochenderfer.

On Secrest's motion, Keller and Treadway were designated as a subcommittee to obtain a statement from Pope, who has not appeared before the library group.

I suppose politicians are jest as kind-hearted as anybody else, but I've seen a lot of 'em make over children and pet dogs jest to get votes. It's when a man gits away out in the open where nobody can see him that his real nature comes to light.

My Uncle Hod was jest crazy about animals and he would go out of his way jest to be considerate to 'em. He was goin' through the woods one day and he heard a noise back of him. When he turned around, he saw a great big, ferocious man-eatin' bear sniffin' at his tracks.

Uncle Hod watched the bear jest a second and then he says, "Oh, so you like my tracks do you?" "All right, I'll make ya some more!"

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

Retirement.

Edward H. Halbach, 40 years in the Government's service and whose hobby of flowers has made him an authority on the subject, retires tomorrow from the Adjutant General's Office. The adjutant general himself will present Halbach with a purse on behalf of the office workers.

He entered the service as an employe of the National Museum on April 6, 1897; on August 12, 1898, he was transferred to the Weather Bureau, then apart from the Department of Agriculture. His transfer to the Adjutant General's Office came on August 14, 1901. The last 25 years' of his service have been spent in charge of the retired officers section.

Notes.

The April meeting of the United Civil Service Employes will be held at 8 o'clock this evening in the Board of Trade, Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue. . . . The advance notice says emphatically: "The public will be admitted; the only stipulation is that no one be quoted outside the meeting without his express consent." . . . Workers in the Department of Commerce will say good-by to three employes on Saturday. They are Lulie R. Clarke, Census, with 37 years 9 months of service; Reuben J. Christman, Coast and Geodetic Survey, with 36 years 8 months service, and George A. Williams, Standards, with 20 years 7 months service.

Friends of David Manley, who is employed in the Conservation Branch of the A. A. A., say that he is scoring "personal and vocal triumphs" twice each night now at the Rialto Theater . . . He is appearing as guest soloist, with Pearl Hauer at the organ . . . The Civil Service Commission announces examinations, as follows: Marketing specialist (Indian Arts and Crafts) $3,200 a year; production adviser (Indian Arts and Crafts) $2,600 a year, Department of the Interior; senior superintendent marine engineer, $4,600 a year, Quartermaster Corps, War Department; examiner, estate tax (internal revenue agent) $3,200 a year, Bureau of Internal Revenue, Treasury Department.

Among the unsung heroes of the Government service is Carrol Smith, whose title is research expert in equine fever in the Bureau of Entomology, Agriculture Department . . . He allows himself to be fed alive to a horde of mosquitoes, those swirling, darting, stingi.g things that drive campers from the woods . . . Smith has permitted this sort of thing since 1927 . . . It is worked this way: The insects feed on Smith's arm and then are permitted to bite an infected Guinea pig . . . After this, the mosquitoes are permitted to bite an uninfected one, and out of all these stinging experiments it is ascertained to what extent mosquitoes transmit disease among horses and cattle . . . Smith explains, however, that the mosquitoes must "be pure" before he submits experimentally to them.

The Government has completed now the second and last of its two glassed-in laboratories, or penthouses on top of the roof of Agriculture's South Building . . . These pethouses are for the use of the scientists who have offices below . . . The new penthouse laboratory will be used in the study of insect pests and specially-treated soils, the kind of work that fresh air and sunshine is needed in . . . The first one was completed last fall . . . Both are a part of original building plans and are not so expensive as such laboratories on the ground nearby would have been, as all land in the vicinity is occupied by business houses, government buildings or parks.

President Roosevelt, in his electrical program for the Nation, is determined to make power almost infinitely cheap, as well as all but infinitely abundant" and to use it as an instrument "to build up and revitalize democracy," it is said by M. L. Ramsay, Rural Electrification Administration official, in his new book, "Pyramids of Power" . . . Two addresses on "Career Service and its Relationship to Administration" will be given tomorrow evening in the Admiral Club, 1640 Rhode Island avenue . . . The speakers are Leonard D. White of the Civil Service Commission and William H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to Secretary Morgenthau . . . John M. Carmody of the R. E. A., will be chairman of the meeting, which is sponsored by the Washington Chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management . . . A dinner will precede the speeches.

Dr. Walter Bauer's Agriculture Orchestra will give a concert in the South Building Auditorium on May 3 and 4, at 8:30 o'clock . . . There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

House Bill Would End Street's Job

Reduction From 9 to 3 Asked by Rep. Wood; Salaries Provided.

Abolishment of the offices of director of public welfare and assistant director and complete change in the character of the board of welfare were proposed yesterday in a bill introduced by Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri.

Wood's bill seeks to reduce the number of members of the board from nine to three, each of whom would draw a salary of $8,000 a year. The present members are not paid.

The Missourian, who is a member of the House District Committee, said he would press for action at once. He predicted the legislation will be passed in the current session.

Efficiency Sought.

The purpose of the bill, he explained, is to obtain greater efficiency in the administration of welfare funds, especially unemployment relief. By providing salaries, board members who are experts in social welfare could be obtained, he said, and they could devote their entire time to the job of administration.

Wood said he had not discussed the proposal with the District Commissioners and does not know Elwood Street, public welfare director.

Under the new administration, the District Commissioners would be required to make the appointments from nominations made by the labor organizations, the citizens' associations and the businessmen's organizations.

Each group would submit the names of three candidates, from which the Commissioners would make one selection.

Secretary Provided.

The only other executive officer provided for in lieu of the director and his assistants is a secretary to the board. His salary is limited to $5,000.

The bill states that "any member of such board may be removed at any time for cause by the District Commissioners."

"Appointments shall be made without discrimination as to sex, color, religion or political affiliation," it adds.

Terms of office would be for six years, as at present, but the first appointments would be of two, four and six years, so that one member will complete his tenure every two years thereafter.

Christ Child Society Is Lauded At 50th Anniversary Gathering

After heaping praise on the Christ Child Society, the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, assistant rector of Catholic University, last night declared "we Catholics fail to realize how well equipped we are to build character."

He spoke at the organization's fiftieth anniversary celebration held in the Raleigh Hotel.

"In character forming," he said, "we must have an ideal. Christianity, in its Christ, provides the perfect ideal of truth and light."

In tribute to the society's work he said, 'Only the Christ Child himself could adequately appreciate what has been done for children in his name. This fiftieth anniversary is an occasion for special exultation Faith without works is dead. This society has done much work. Everyone should be an apostle in its behalf."

Earlier a message from the president, Miss Mary V. Merrick, was read. Miss Merrick was the founder, and has been continuous president of the society.

Following her message, motion pictures were shown of the society-sponsored convalescent farm in Rockville, Md., and of the Settlement House at 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast.

Beside Miss Merrick, other officers of the organization are Mrs. Arthur Mullen, Mrs. D. C. Stapleton and Mrs. James Emery, vice presidents; Mrs. Charles P. Neill, corresponding secretary; Miss Borredell Gower, recording secretary; Mrs. Robert Cahill, assistant secretary, and Mrs. Charles Semmes, treasurer.

In 1886 Mary Merrick was an invalid, unable to raise her back or head from her bed. But she was thoughtful, hopeful and sympathtic with the plight of others, and, to fill her empty moments, she began to make layettes for poverty-stricken Washington families.

Since then the Christ Child Society has grown. It is now active in 33 cities, distributes 235 layettes annually here, has brought Christmas presents to 2,348 Washington homes and has provided 11,960 days of care for 170 ill children.

Big Solar Storm Is Playing Havoc With Broadcasts

By the United Press.

A magnetic disturbance now raging on the sun is knocking out the earth's telegraph, and radio transmission and may rank as the "storm of the century," Dr. A. G. McNish, of the Carnegie Institution, of Washington, said last night.

The disturbance, which upsets the normal magnetic currents of the earth and thus interferes with communications, started Sunday. It was still going full blast when the scientist checked up yesterday. Already it has equaled the biggest solar "storm" on record for this century—the one extending from May 13-17, 1921.

The present "storm" hasn't been quite as severe as the record holder, but it has thrown whole strings of telegraph wires out of commission, practically eliminated long-distance radio broadcasting because of static and interfered with some transatlantic telephone conversations.

Dr. McNish said that the disturbance on the sun is tied in some way with the frequency of sun spots and when the sun spots are most numerous, the magnetic interference is greatest.

Dr. McNish said that brilliant aurora displays or northern lights should be visible during the current storm, although he added that cloudy nights in Washington had prevented his observing them here.

In a paper before the American Geophysical Union, Dr. McNish discussed another solar phenomenon—solar flares—which cause radio fadeouts. On several occasions during the past year bright outbursts of light in the regions of the sun spots have been observed at the same time that "dead spots" were reported for daylight, long-distance radio signals.

100 True Bills To Be Sought In Gambling

U. S. Begins Presenting Evidence Obtained in 62 Raids.

Four Cases Laid Before District Grand Jury By Beach.

Culminating a series of 62 raids on suspected gaming establishments in the city, Assistant United States Attorney Samuel F. Beach yesterday began presenting evidence to the District Grand jury by which he hopes to obtain indictments charging about 100 men and women with either conspiracy to violate the gaming laws or actual violations.

Presentation of the first case was begun late yesterday but before the jurors adjourned for the day, four cases had been given them for consideration. It is planned to present six additional cases today and eight or ten tomorrow. The same ratio of cases will be preserved until the entire list is exhausted.

Included in those whose cases are under consideration is William Dietz, erstwhile head of National Telecast, a race track information service that was supplying track information to about a hundred establishments in the city. A raid on his headquarters in the Albee building precipitated the gaming raids and caused many operators to either flee the city or close up shop.

Prediction Is Declined.

Beach was unwilling to venture a prediction as to the number of men and women who will be indicated. He said that he would present every bit of evidence he has to the grand jury and would stand aside while that body goes over the cases and makes up its mind. He said that some of the cases involved the highly played numbers game, others involved outright gaming places where the races, poker and craps were freely played, and still others were instances in which no bets were being taken but where there was guilty knowledge that relayed information was being used in handbook places.

No return by the grand jury is expected until most of the cases have been finished.

Six men were released on bonds totaling $10,500 yesterday when they were arraigned before the United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on gambling charges.

Two Give $2,000 Bonds.

Sam Schaeffer, 47, 700 block N street northwest, and Howard M. Fowler, 41, 400 block Fifth street southeast, were released on $2,000 bond each. Each was charged with setting up a gaming table.

Oscar Bryant, colored, was held under a $2,000 bail when he pleaded not guilty to a lottery charge. The case was continued until next Wednesday. Hubert L. Turner, colored, also charged with operating a lottery, was allowed to post $500 bond for a hearing next week.

Charges of conspiracy to violate and violating gaming laws resulted in Cleveland Howard, colored, and Cewall Frederick, also colored, appearing before Turnage. Both made bonds of $2,000 and the cases were continued for two weeks.

Swanson Denies Prison Corruption

Denials that dope peddling, organized and open gambling and perversion exist at the Naval Prison at Portsmouth, N. H., according to the report of a board of investigation, were made public yesterday by Secretary of the Navy Swanson.

Charges of irregularities were directed at the prison on March 15. Senator H. Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, reported to Secretary Swanson that prison employes had complained of irregularities, and had further stated that employes were terrorized to such an extent that most of them were afraid to reveal what they knew.

According to the Secretary, "the Navy Department is convinced that the allegations * * * are without merit, and has every confidence in the administration of the Naval Prison at Portsmouth."

Miss Marie Costa . Anti-Communism Contest Winner

Branding communism "a political Frankenstein, born in a period of universal human distress," Miss Marie Costa, speaking last night in Holy Trinity Hall, as the representative of Immaculate Seminary, condemned those alien groups that are "blasting at the foundation stones upon which our great American Government and society have been reared."

Appearing in a contest with Miss Mary Agnes Bier, of Sacred Heart Academy; Miss Eileen O'Donnell, of the Immaculate Conception Academy, and Thomas Cane, of St. Paul's Academy, Miss Costa was declared the winner.

"To us communism is death," said Miss Costa, "in that it deprives man of the liberty of religion, speech, press and conscience."

Judges were the Rev. Peter Bergen, of Catholic University; Miss Edna Sheehy and Leo Codd. Miss Costa now may participate in the archdiocesan contest at Catholic University Monday.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE
Caused by Tired Kidneys
Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.
If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

D. C. Lawyers Say Abattoir Will Be Built

Ickes Asserts Structure Here Would Be A 'Noisome Offense.'

Though a determined fight is being made against it by Secretary Ickes, the slaughterhouse in Benning will be built and go into operation, District Building attorneys yesterday unofficially declared.

At the same time they condemned the bill introduced into Congress Tuesday by Senator King as "unconstitutional." That bill designed to "prevent future abattoirs," contains a retroactive clause, which, it is thought, may militate against the Adolf Gobel Co., slaughterhouse licensees.

Called "Disgraceful."

Yesterday Secretary Ickes, Public Works Administrator, who at one time called "the idea of an abattoir in the District disgraceful," issued a statement saying, among other things, it would be a "noisome offense."

Ickes' sttement follows:

"A new slaughterhouse in Washington is absolutely unnecessary. It would make a blighted area out of a community which could be developed into one of the most pleasant districts in the city. It would constitute a noisome offense within sight of the United States Capitol. It would hopelessly blotch years of earnest work to make Washington a residential city free of industry.

"Careful plans have been drawn up for park and public development in the vicinity directly adjacent to the present abandoned packing plant. Reconstruction of this plant would make it impossible to go ahead with the badly needed improvements contemplated for the area.

"I am informed that a bill has been introduced in the Senate by Senator King, which, if passed, will make it impossible for the nuisance to operate. The Public Works Administration and the Interior Department have opposed this slaughterhouse from the beginning and will continue to do so. The issue is now up to Congress and it is my sincere hope that it will follow its consistent policy of keeping the National Capital free from such detrimental activities. The question is far from settled.

"I can not understand how any man who has any pride in his citizenship in the Capital of his country would think of building within the District what would amount to a public nuisance."

Edison Is Studying Navy Labor Policy

A "fresh examination" of the Navy's labor policies, in light of the Supreme Court's decisions in the Wagner Labor Relations cases, is being made by Assistant Secretary Charles Edison, it was learned yesterday.

In a letter to Senator Peter G. Gerry, of Rhode Island, Edison stated recent events "have made it evident to me that this subject should be carefully gone into and I am giving it most earnest study * * * It is my opinion that the Navy Department's attitude toward civilian employes should reflect present-day conditions and the highest modern ideals, and I am prepared to recommend to the Secretary any changes that I may find necessary to accomplish this result."

Edison reaffirmed his intention to examine thoroughly the Navy's labor policy at a conference yesterday with Senator Gerry and Senator Theodore F. Green, the other Rhode Island Senator.

Two Accused Of Stock Fraud On Trial Here

New Yorkers Charged With Misrepresentation in SEC Statement.

Charged with conspiring to misrepresent facts contained in a registration statement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission Harry E. Hanes and Milton Janis, both of New York, were placed on trial in District Court yesterday. Justice F. Dickinson Letts is presiding.

The two men, together with Dan F. Reynolds, an attorney, were indicted after a statement setting forth the Continental Distillers & Importers Corporation financial outlook had been filed with the Securities Commission. Reynolds is not being tried because of ill health, two physicians having certified that he is dangerously ill.

David A. Pine, assistant United States attorney, declared in opening the case that the corporation asserted in its statement that the indictment grew out of statements concerning property at Shrewsbury, Pa. The property was not suitable for distilling purposes, it was charged. The corporation is said to have sold $40,000 in stock although it never began operations.

Janis, represented by William E. Leahy, and Hanes, represented by John J. Sirica and Richard Doyle, of New York, have denied they were guilty of making statements that could lead to the charges.

Twenty-three witnesses have been summoned by the Government and as many more are to appear for the defense. The case is the first of its kind to be brought to trial here.

Religious Faster Growing Weaker; Visitors Barred

Stooping Oak, Tenn., April 28 (AP). Visitors were barred today from the mountain cabin of Jackson Whitlow, 45-year-old religious faster, as he became too weak to move around in bed.

Whitlow listed it as the fiftieth day he had refrained from food, a record which Dr. Morris Fishbein, of Chicago, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, described as "remarkable if true." Dr. Fishbein said the longest authenticated fast he could recall was the 40-day hunger strike of the Irish politician, McSweeeny.

Whitlow said he started his fast March 10 on a "call from the Lord." He will not eat again, he declared, until "the Lord speaks."

Soviet Cuts Prices Upon Retail Goods

Moscow, April 28 (AP).—The council of people's commissars tonight announced a decree cutting prices on retail goods from 5 to 16 per cent. Cuts will be effective June 1 and July 1.

The decree mentioned cotton, woolen and linen textiles, shoes, perfumery, furs, underwear, knited goods, haberdashery and other articles.

It said the reductions were possible "in view of the success of industrial production and accomplishments of the second five-year plan before the term fixed, which brought an accumulation of new material resources into the hands of the government."

Unicameral House Saves State $75,000

Lincoln, Nebr., April 28 (AP).—The Nation's only unicameral Legislature neared the end of its first session today satisfied it can turn out in less time and at a cheaper rate as many laws as a two-house body.

Nebraska legislators, awaiting only a final committee report on the $50,000,000 biennial budget bill before adjourning, figured the change from bicameral sessions saved the State about $75,000.

Two Washingtonians Elected To National Sciences Academy

Two Washingtonians were honored yesterday by election to the National Academy of Sciences, select organization of American scientists whose membership is limited to 300.

Charles Thom and Donnel Foster Hewett were among the 15 elected. The former is a botanist and mycologist in the Department of Agriculture and Hewett is attached to the Geological Survey.

Carl Gottfried Hartman, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington department of embryology in Baltimore, also was chosen for membership.

The academy re-elected as its vice president Arthur L. Day, geophysicist of the Carnegie Institution of Washington. His new four-year term expires June 30, 1941.

Two Named to Council.

H. S. Jennings and Oswald Veblen were elected to the academy council for three-year terms. August Krogh, professor of zoophysiology at the University of Copenhagen, was elected as a foreign associate.

The other 12 newly elected members of the academy are Calvin Blackman Bridges, Oliver Ellsworth Buckley, Arthur Jeffery Dempster Ernest William Goodpasture, Leo Loeb, Duncan Arthur MacInnes, George Richards Minot, John von Neumann, Seth Barnes Nicholson, Otto Struve, Francis Bertody Sumner and Edward Chace Tolman.

With the annual meeting of the National Academy of Sciences over, "science week" in the Capital continued yesterday with separate sessions of the American Meteorological Society and the American Geophysical Union.

More than 100 weather forecasters from all over the United States and Canada heard a description of a photographic method of charting night winds high above the earth which has been devised by Athelstan F. Spilhaus, of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute.

Uses "Whole Sky Camera."

The process, developed in the meteorological laboratory of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, makes use of a "whole sky camera" with a 180-degree lens, a pilot balloon and magnesium flares attached to a length of ordinary blasting fuse.

The method has been used successfully to determine the direction and velocity of winds in the upper atmosphere. It has wide practical applications, with weather forecasting and aircraft movements especially dependent upon wind information.

Sectional meeting on terrestrial magnetism and electricity, oceanography and volcanology were conducted yesterday by the Geophysical Union at the National Museum.

The assembled weathermen will attend the union's meteorology section meeting this morning.

Clubwomen Study Court Plan Attack

Tulsa, Okla., April 28 (AP).—Broad action on State and international affairs occupied the General Federation of Women's Clubs tonight, but President Roosevelt's Federal court reorganization proposal dominated the interest in their council meetings.

Formally placed before them on first reading, a "statement of principle" objected to the President's court plan. It awaited a debate tomorrow night and formal discussion before a vote Friday.

While the council's stand on his court proposal impended, the President, in a message, promised support to the clubwomen in their program for aid to American women who, without vocational training, must supplement the family budget.

By Russell Smith

The House yesterday approved a $742,439 appropriation for surveys to bring to the point of construction the Gilbertsville Dam on the Tennessee River, first step toward a flood-control and navigation project which ultimately may be the greatest in the world.

Chairman Arthur E. Morgan, of the Tennessee Valley Authority, applied such terms as this to the project while justifying estimates of the TVA, hearings on the second deficiency appropriation bill made public yesterday revealed.

After discussing a proposal for a "superdam" at the mouth of the Tennessee, across both the Ohio and the Tennessee, Morgan said the TVA has rejected such a proposal in favor of the Gilbertsville dam and a possible supplementary dam.

"Another possibility for the controlling of the two (rivers)," he said, "is to build the Gilbertsville Dam and then later to build a second dam across the Ohio River at the mouth of the Cumberland a little ways up the stream from the mouth of the Tennessee, and then to cut a channel above the Gilbertsville Dam across a narrow gravel ridge to the Cumberland River.

May Use Varied Levels.

"That would provide one water level for those three streams, though it might be desirable to make possible different levels in the Tennessee, on the one hand, and the Ohio and Cumberland, on the other. That is, it might be desirable to have control gates in the channel connecting the Cumberland and the Tennessee rivers, for use only during great floods.

"The combined reservoir would create nearly 500 miles of excellent navigable channel without a lock, from the Pickwick dam down to the mouth of the Tennessee river, and then up the Cumberland river nearly to Nashville, up the Ohio river toward Louisville, and up the Wabash and White rivers—a waterway in economic importance perhaps equaling Lake Erie.

"You would have a quarter of a million kilowatts of electric power."

The House declined to vote $2,000,000 additional, however, with which to start construction of the Gilbertsville Dam, which, alone will cost $112,000,000. Cost estimates of the second suggested dam were not given, and Dr. Morgan emphasized that the Gilbertsville Dam would be built on its own merits so that Congress will not be committed to the second dam.

Preliminary Work Provided.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and other Senators and Representatives from the States affected made pleas during the hearings for funds with which to begin construction, and there remains some possibility the $2,000,000 will be voted in the Senate. The survey funds, however, will complete all necessary preliminary work.

In the course of the protracted hearings, Dr. Morgan disclosed that ultimate cost of the TVA program proper has been revised upward from $479,150,000 to $520,600,388. He said the increase is due to higher labor and material costs, increased elevation of some dams for greater flood and water storage, digging down to rock at some places instead of using piles and heavier costs for timber clearance.

By the Associated Press.

The House voted yesterday to appropriate $700 for a gold medal for George M. Cohan, song writer and actor, despite "economy" objections of Republicans. The medal would honor Cohan for his work during the World War.

Marines and V. M. I. Cadets Begin Drills for Crater Battle

Preliminary Instructions Given 'Fighters' for Re-enactment of Civil War Episode; Practice Will Continue Today.

Petersburg, Va., April 28 (AP).—Preliminary instructions for re-enactment of the Battle of the Crater Friday were given today as the Virginia Military Institute cadet corps moved up to the field of battle.

The cadets arrived today from Lexington. Meanwhile 1,200 marines from Quantico already were quartered at "Camp Lejeune."

The two "armies" drilled today and will continue drills tomorrow for the battle, feature event in the formal dedication ceremonies of the battlefield as part of the Petersburg National Military Park.

Special details of city, county and State police have been assigned for duty Friday. Visitors from throughout the State as well as neighboring States are expected.

The battle will depict the thrust and counter-thrust of Union and Confederate troops as the Federals sought to capture Petersburg. Union soldiers fired 8,000 pounds of powder under the Confederate lines in an effort to gain a strategic advantage—but Petersburg did not fall until eight months later.

No Planes Permitted.

Richmond, Va., April 28 (AP).—There will be no "incongruous" droning of modern planes over the Crater Battlefield area when the famous Civil War engagement is re-enacted there Friday if the Virginia Corporation Commission can help it.

R. E. Steele, director of aviation for the commission, today requested pilots not to fly over the park between 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. that day because "the flying of planes over an enactment of a Civil War battle will be incongruous and the noise of airplane motors will be disturbing."

Filene Sees Wealth Against Court Plan

New York, April 8 (AP).—The reason behind opposition to President Roosevelt's judicial reorganization plan was held by Edward A. Filene tonight to be a desire by the privileged classes to block the New Deal program.

The Boston department-store executive, presenting a layman's view of the controversy over a national radio hook-up, said the President was seeking to keep his pledge to bring about a "fuller and fairer" distribution of wealth.

Both the President and the Supreme Court were bound to stay within the Constitution, he said, the only difference being that the Court "could and did amend the Constitution to fit the views of the judges, whereas the President could not."

"He and Congress, however, could amend the Supreme Court," Filene added.

Anti-Profiteering Bill Is Revised

By the Associated Press.

The House Military Committee agreed Tuesday to recommend drastically revised legislation to take the profits out of war.

A provision for conscription of men between 21 and 31 years of age, in event of war, was stricken from the bill by the committee. Sections assigning to the President powers for mobilization of industry and capital were retained.

The committee deleted a section calling for a 95 per cent tax on all profits in excess of the average for a three-year period preceding the outbreak of war. It recommended a wartime taxation system which would absorb all surplus profits above a "fair normal return."

Fish Asks $25 Limit On Purchase of Gold

By the Associated Press.

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, proposed yesterday that Congress direct the Treasury not to buy any more gold from foreign sources at more than $25 an ounce.

"The outstanding financial blunder and the height of New Deal folly," he told the House, "is the accummulation of 12 billions of gold, of which 4 billions have been imported from foreign nations at $35 an ounce, or approximately twice the cost of production."

New York, April 28 (AP).—Susan Lawrence Davis, of Washington, D. C., and Athens, Ala., and author of "Authentic History of the Ku Klux Klan, 1865-1877," filed a plagiarism suit in United States District Court here today against MacMillan Co., publishers of "Gone With the Wind."

The complaint charged that Margaret Mitchell "unfairly used and appropriated material and substantial parts of the plaintiff's work" and that the Georgia woman's book is "to a large extent a copy of the complainant's original work, studies and researches with slight changes made in an effort to conceal the fact of such copying."

The suit demands an accounting, the surrender of book, plates and matrices, and damages of "not less than $5,000 for each infringement."

Miss Bicking, head of the federation's college and school music department, said the organization's ultimate goal was a fine arts department in the National Government, with a secretary in the Cabinet.

Court Orders 9 to Face Trial InBondingCase

Prince Georges Tribunal Refuses to Quash Indictments.

Declining to sustain defense attorneys who charged the indictments should be declared invalid, the Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday ruled the nine men charged with conspiracy in Prince Georges County must stand trial.

The defendants are Herbert J. Moffat, former justice of the peace at Hyattsville, Md., Elmer Pumphrey, bondsman, of Suitland, Md., and Albert Anderson, Howard Slater, Warren Peake, Claude Reese, Maurice Hampton, Arthur Brown and Frank Bell, former members of the county police force. They were indicted last December after a two-months' investigation by the grand jury into reports of an alleged bonding conspiracy.

On the eve of their scheduled trials about two weeks ago, their attorneys filed with the court four pleas, contending the indictments should be dismissed on the grounds they had been obtained through illegal methods.

Specifically, the defense charged that R. R. C. Connick, grand jury foreman, had conferred with Louis Lebowitz, attorney of Mount Rainier, who was the first to bring charges of malpractices against the indicted men.

The defense also took exception to the admission of affidavits as evidence, claiming this was a violation of the laws governing the conduct of grand juries.

States Attorney Alan Bowie and Ogle Marbury, special prosecutor, filed a demurrer in answer to these pleas. In rendering their decision, the court sustained the demurrer.

No date for the trials was set, but court attaches expressed the opinion the cases would not come up before June 1. It was believed possible that they may be continued until the October term of court.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman Who's Been Courting Widower by Letter Asks 'How Can I Bring Him to Point of Matrimony?'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some months ago (perhaps you will remember) I wrote you a letter asking your advice on winning a man through correspondence. You discouraged the idea to such an extent that I almost decided to let well enough alone and turn to pastures nearer home—although I must say Washington does not seem to be any too well supplied with eligible men.

• • • •

However, I went on with my correspondence and since that time the man in question has twice come to Washington to visit me. Considering the fact that his home is 3,000 miles from here I feel that two visits in four months indicate some slight interest in me. I have become more and more interested in him as time goes on. In fact, so interested that I daresay it sticks out all over me when I am with him. I tell myself, "indifference wins them," but somehow I cannot make myself appear indifferent, in spite of the fact that I have had considerable experience in handling men both professionally and socially.

• • • •

Now the point is this, Miss Haworth—although you would not tell me what I could do in the way of letter-writing to gain this man's interest, now that I have it (or do I?), how can I bring him to the point of matrimony? I really feel that we could make a go of it. He is quite quick tempered, but I have a good disposition, am considered good looking, have a good job, am 15 years younger than he, women as well as men like me (including the wives of former boy friends) and I do not think I would be considered exactly a drawback to him. He is a widower and evidently was very much in love with his wife. I would make allowances for that, too.

• • • • •

He wants me to visit his State next summer on my vacation and promises to show me everything of interest. I would like your advice as to whether I should go. I feel that if nothing more is to come of this affair I would rather drop it while there is time. I am truly fond of this man, but could give him up if necessary. He has written me two letters since he left here a week ago (merely friendly letters, though), and as yet I have not answered them.

Miss Haworth, I will appreciate your appraisal of this situation. What chance do you think I have of marrying this man? And what should be my attitude toward him? I feel I have stated the facts rather badly, but perhaps you will be able to grasp my situation. At any rate, I feel that any advice you might feel inclined to give would be very much worth while. (Incidentally, I do know quite a bit about this man from friends who introduced us and from members of his family I have since met.) CAROLYN H.

• • • •

Tactics to Adopt.

DEAR CAROLYN H: When a widower comes 3,000 miles twice in four months to call on an unmarried woman, it is reasonable to suppose he is toying with the idea of marrying her. But the fact that he says good by without proposing suggests that she seems less suitable close up than she does at long range. This may be because her background is so different from his that, seeing her against it, he is not sure she could fit in to the picture at home.

• • • •

Proceeding on this theory, since you are determined to marry the man if possible, it might be well to visit his State next summer with the idea of proving beyond the shadow of a doubt that you are capable of showing to womanly advantage in any circumstance, situation or environment. Your going, of course, amounts to a declaration of serious interest in the man, as no woman of adequate social interests is likely to make a 3,000-mile trip to see a man whom she regards only as a friend or pleasant acquaintance. But that need not deter you. Your life is your own to live, and if you believe it would be enriched by the permanent addition of this man, you are justified in doing your best to get him.

• • • •

Don't be too sure that "indifference wins them." Indifference implies lack of interest or feeling; also coldness, lukewarmness and unconcern. These qualities are not to be confused with self-respecting independence of mind and spirit and that personal resourcefulness which enables the individual to take chances, withstand disappointments and go on living a satisfactory and happy life in spite of all reversals. I should say, rather, "independence wins them," though a certain gentle, appreciative dependence may be required to hold them. An independent woman might make such a trip as you propose, while an indifferent woman never would.

• • • •

The attitude to take toward the man—an attitude which it is perfectly possible to take without sacrificing an iota of your independence and self-respect—is one of real pleasure at seeing him, thorough enjoyment of his society, heartwarming appreciation of his admirable qualities (whatever they may be), sympathetic interest in all that interests him and sincere concern with his general welfare. After all, isn't this the attitude we take toward all our friends whom we count worth knowing?

• • • •

I can't promise that the trip will net a proposal and I have no idea what your chances are of marrying the man. I do know, however, that desolated widowers are the most matrimonially minded of men, and that those who have been very much in love with their late wife most often marry, for the second time, a woman whom they believe bears some marked resemblance to her. This need not be a physical resemblance, but may be one of spirit, mind or personality. Find out what the man's mental image of his late wife is, and try in subtle ways to convince him of your likeness to her. M. H.

A Modern Room Reflects Colonial Simplicity

Photograph courtesy Williamsburg Galleries.

A charming living room for the modern house or apartment, inspired by early American decorating. Marbleized wallpaper for the cornice, chair rail, baseboard, door and window trim cleverly accents the gray painted walls. Draperies are soft blue. Upholstery is a pleasing combination of beige and rose tones. The rug repeats these colors. Old yellow Chinese spode and Lowestoff lamp bases are used. Note the comfortable chairs and sofa and Old English bird prints.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

WE DON'T SEEM to grow as many toe-dancers as we used to. I mean real top-notchers. Probably because it's like golf—in order to be a genuine ace you have to practice hours every day, and your toes get sore, and life seems hardly worth living.

ALICE HUGHES

Of our native-born ballerinas, only two really clutch the heart, and they are Harriet Hoctor and Patricia Bowman. Harriet will be seen in the new Astaire-Rogers film, "Shall We Dance?" and now Patsy comes back to her native shores, after eight months abroad, and becomes the focal point of news. Little Pat, who was christened Edna, is a Washington child who used to pirouette with the late Father Hurney's St. Patrick Players here. And a reedy kid she was, giving no promise of the beauty that is now hers.

There are two yarns current about Pat's future. One is that her master, Fokine, will have her at the head of a great ballet to tour Europe. The other is that she will lead an American ballet of 100 in a tour of this country. Whichever way it falls, young Bowman's artistic future looks happy.

For years Patsy led the ballet at the Roxy, being the protegee of that redoubtable showman, and she was the ballerina of the Radio City Music Hall for a year after it opened. A brilliant dancer, owing to her constant study with Fokine, she has probably spent years on her toes—and every day, rain or shine, a foot-doctor came backstage at the Music Hall to tend those expensive pinkies. I love the art of the classic ballet, and am glad that our own Pat is going to go all over the world on her toes, showing us how it should be done!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I sat through a bit of real drama at a movie a few nights ago. The picture was that astonishing newsreel complication called "Tsar to Lenin," and my seatmate was Princess Alexandra Kropotkin, the famous noble anarchist who came back to Russia from exile after the '17 Revolution. Suddenly her mother and father flashed on the screen, and Sasha couldn't help crying. The dear little old lady still-lives in Moscow, let alone by the Soviets, and tending a museum in which are collected all the documents left by Prince Kropotkin. I visited her in '32, bringing her a great treasure—pounds of American coffee. Sasha, whose department in Liberty is popular, is now doing a cookbook!

Have you seen a copy of "Baby Talk," the new monthly for mothers and children? Very nicely done—and full of those baby pictures considered irresistible by one and all.

• • • •

Someone is always improving our lot. Now it is Brother T. J. Mathieu, who runs the Piccadilly Hotel here. He avers that "waitress" is an undignified term for the angels who carry the trays, and offers $25 for a name "conveying the dignity, wit, intelligence and personality which go hand in hand with good table service." My hunch is that the girls won't mind being called "waitress" if every tip is a quarter at least!

• • • •

Just as the best-named cooking department in this town is "Home on the Range," so the girl delegated to handle houseware by one of the bigger chain stores calls herself "Joan Kitchener." Her husband is probably Frank J. Frigidaire.

• • • •

And you'd better rush if you want to see our French Casino Follies, which has already been eyed by a quarter of a million merry-makers. And it's still the gaudiest show in town, bar none.

Early America in Vogue Again In Home as Well as Wardrobe

By Ethel Ehlen.

THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY has returned to vogue in houses as well as in the wardrobe. With period-influenced styles in the fashion picture, it is not surprising that smart rooms should take a cue and resort to the lovely decorating of this period for inspiration. By following the colonial trends of this period, either small or large houses or apartments may be decorated with good taste, as well as smartness. The eighteenth century English requires large rooms for best effect and, preferably, large houses.

As in clothes of the current times, furniture is now bought with an eye to comfort as well as to trends and influences. Chairs and sofas that are really comfortable, with deep upholstery in which you can sink down and relax; lamps scientifically planned to protect the eyes while reading as well as adding color and atmosphere to a room; tables adequate to take care of smoking and reading accessories and of the right height—all of these can be found in the lovely colonial reproductions and adaptations now available.

Since colonial comprises so many influences, it follows that furniture of this period is easily adaptable to rooms of various kinds, and that it combines well with decorating of other themes. With the comfort unknown in colonial days, modern rooms of early American decorating can be made a model of charm and hospitality. Chippendale chairs and sofas, Chinese spode and Lowestoft lamp bases, Sheffield silver, Adams tables and chairs, Old English prints for the walls, Chinese wallpaper, lovely brocade for the windows and upholstery and Sheraton pieces of mahogany are some of the mediums for acquiring this charming atmosphere.

In the same theme and much less expensive are the early American rooms done in maple—this is an ideal plan for small apartments and small houses, particularly the old houses that have been restored and which combine the old and the new most effectively. Light or dark maple in simple pieces, accented with colorful rag rugs, gay chintzes, Lotany prints for the walls, bits of old pewter, candlewick bedspreads, milk and sandwich glass are timely suggestions for giving your home a restful, pleasing and smart atmosphere. Another interesting thing about maple—it is inexpensive without looking cheap; it has character, if well chosen.

Besides the furniture and accessories which go to give rooms atmosphere, good taste and allure, color is of paramount importance. Women of today can get many inspirations from early American settings, particularly fresh and enchanting color schemes, noted for exclusiveness. The clever home decorator is a bit daring in her use of color, combining the unusual rather than the obvious; this gives character to her rooms and makes them typically her own. For instance, eggplant and wine shades combined with subtle blues and greens; old gold with different tones of gray; yellow, beige and rose; off-white shades with blues, and brick-red and black are some of the many color combinations which can be cleverly combined in themes to give relaxation or stimulation to otherwise cold and uninteresting rooms.

Interest in Recipe Contest Brings Honors to Extra Five

By Rebekah Blake.

DUE TO the wide interest in the Traditional recipe contest held by The Post last week, five honorable mention recipes have been selected. These were received by Mrs. H. Cleveland, Alexandria, Va., for her recipe for Salt Rising Bread; Mrs. E. B. Muse, 1638 Fifteenth street northwest, for her recipe for Oyster and Spareribs Pie; Mrs. E. C. Cooper, 4302 Tenth street northeast, for her recipe for Grandmother's Molasses Pies; Mrs. B. P. Hessler, 218 S street northeast, for her recipe for Sauerbraten and Kartoffel Klos and Mrs. J. Lawlor, 1629 Thirty-fifth street northwest, for her recipe for Lobster a la Newburg.

Mrs. Cleveland's recipe:

Salt Rising Bread.

Scald a quart pitcher and fill it one-third full of water as warm as the finger can be held in it, then add a teaspoon of salt, of brown sugar and flour to make a batter as for griddle cakes. Set the pitcher in a closed vessel half filled with water medium hot. Keep the temperature the same. Add a teaspoonful of flour once or twice during the fermenting. The yeast ought to reach the top in five hours. Sift your flour in a pan and make a hole in it and pour in the yeast. Have a pitcher of warm milk salted. Stir this into a pulpy mass with a spoon. Cover the sponge closely and keep closed and warm for one hour, then knead into loaves and place in well greased pan and cover until the dough is light. Bake in a steady oven and when done, let the hot steam out. Wrap closely in damp towels and keep in closed earthenware jars until it is wanted.

Here is Mrs. Muse's recipe:

Oyster and Spareribs Pie.

Use 1 pound of spareribs and 1 pint of oysters. Stew the spareribs until tender. Take out the bones, salt and pepper to taste, thicken with flour, and let cool. While cooling make a piecrust (not too flaky), using top and bottom crust. Line a deep pie plate, put in spareribs and oysters, alternately, then pieces of butter. Cover with top crust, gash in several places, place in moderate oven and let stay until a delicate brown.

This pie serves as the main meat dish and also takes the place of bread.

Mrs. Cooper's recipe:

Grandmother's Molasses Pies.

1 cup New Orleans molasses
¼ cup butter
4 eggs, beaten
4 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons vinegar
½ cup cream
3 crackers, rolled fine
4 tablespoons rum
½ cup ground almonds
¾ teaspoon salt
Flaky pastry

Cut rounds of pastry about 4 inches in diameter. Place each over botton and sides of a floured tumbler and press down in a muffin tin. Remove tumbler. When all are placed, set to chill while making filling.

Heat molasses in a saucepan, add butter, sugar, vinegar. Remove from fire, stir in beaten eggs and cracker crumbs softened in the rum. Add cream and salt, pour into muffin tins and bake in a moderate oven about 15 minutes. Sprinkle ground almonds over tops while they are hot.

Mrs. Hessler's recipe follows:

Sauerbraten and Kartoffel Klos.

Place about 5 pounds of clear beef in a deep dish with one tablespoon of salt, one tablespoon sugar, 3 onions sliced, a few bay leaves, 1 teaspoon whole cloves, 2 large carrots sliced, soup greens such as leek, parsley and celery cut fine, a dash of pepper and a cup of tomatoes, either fresh or canned. Cover the meat and other ingredients with a mixture made from vinegar and water, using 3 cups vinegar to 6 cups of water. Be sure the meat is thoroughly covered, and allow to stand for three days. Then boil until tender.

In a separate utensil boil 12 large potatoes. When soft peel and put through a ricer. Add salt and pepper to taste, 3 eggs, 3 tablespoons milk and 2 cups flour. Mix well and form into soft balls, taking care to dredge the hands well with flour to prevent sticking. Have a pot of water boiling, drop the balls into it and allow to boil 15 to 20 minutes. Then drain and serve hot with the meat and plenty of gravy, made by boiling the liquor from the meat with a half-pound of gingersnaps crumbled into it. Just before serving the meat may be warmed up in the gravy, either whole or sliced, as you prefer and if you have any dumplings left over, they are excellent sliced cold and fried a delicate brown for luncheon.

CAPITAL MANNERS

By Margaret Wallace.

THE ENTERTAINMENT of the house guest often offers a problem to Washington hostesses. This is particularly true when a guest comes for a visit of more than a few days. How much entertainment should the hostess provide? To what extent should the guest be left to follow personal interests?

Hostess' Problem.

One hostess has written as follows:

I do not feel that I can have the entertainment of my guest on my mind for two whole weeks. I invited her for two weeks, although I usually limit my house guests to a week-end. This guest came all the way from California, and I did not feel that she would like to make the trip for less time. She seems to expect me to arrange her days for her and even consults me before she accepts invitations to dinners and luncheons. The persons who invite her try to get me to come also. She lived in Washington until several years ago and knows many people here. Just how much concern should I give to her entertainment?

This is a casual age and many hostesses leave their house guests more or less to their own devices. But it is a little "too casual" not to take a real interest in the entertainment of a house guest. The hostess has as much responsibility for a house guest who stays for two weeks as for a week-end guest.

The guest is quite correct in consulting her hostess before she accepts an invitation to luncheon or dinner. It is also correct for the hostess to be included in the invitation. But it also is considered good form for the guest to accept an invitation after she had consulted her hostess and finds that it does not conflict with any plans the hostess has made. It is good form for the hostess to suggest that her house guest accept invitations. If the hostess cannot accept the invitation, it is proper for the house guest to go without her.

While it is correct to extend invitations to the house guest when the hostess is invited to lunch or dine out, it is also good form for the hostess to attend a dinner or other such function to which she has been invited and accepted before the house guest arrived.

Should Explain to Guest.

If the hostess does dine out while she has a house guest, she should explain the situation to her guest and arrange some entertainment for her for the evening, such as giving her a dinner at home or having a frined invite her to dinner. It is never good form to be casual about such matters.

Guests should be invited to go to church on Sunday if the hostess or family goes, but they should not be urged. It is good form for a guest to attend church of her own denomination after she has consulted her hostess. The thoughful hostess will find out where the church is and the hours of service and if possible arrange for transportation for her guest.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Modern Women Accused.

Since the very beginning (Genesis 3), there has been a tendency to blame everything on the woman. She just can't seem to do things in a sensible and healthy way, according to her critics. It used to be corsets; she laced too tight, that's what made her unhealthy. Then she took 'em off, or so far as I know, she did, and that didn't please any better because, so they said, this let the abdomen sag and we have a race of visceroptotics.

High heels and long skirts that swept the dust and too much underwear and starvation diets have all had their innings for criticism. Well, here's the latest. The modern girl "demands to be treated as an equal, expects to be treated like a duchess, and she behaves like a washer woman."

Effects of Emancipation.

Geoffrey Theobald has arisen and on the subject "Some Effects of Emancipation on the Health of Women," he says:

"She copies the coolie woman of the Chinese bazaar in plucking her eyebrows, the Siamese peasant in bobbing her hair, the Arab in letting her nails grow like claws and painting them a hideous red, the courtesan in painting all visible parts of her anatomy, and in painting and powering her self in public betrays incredible vulgarity. She is so restless that she cannot sit peacefully at home; she cannot eat her meals without smoking and is unhappy unless she is at the dance or cinema."

In the meantime, it is presumed that the male—that superior and completely reasonable animal—is doing everything exactly the right way. He doesn't smoke too much. He doesn't do anything to injure his efficiency, such as getting outside of about a hundred highballs some evening. He dresses sensibly—oh! yes, as if he were going to the North Pole, in order to sit in offices where the temperature is 80 and the humidity that of the Sahara desert. He doesn't join about 15 more lodges, clubs and luncheon groups than he can afford on the grounds that it makes contacts, and then run himself to a frazzle trying to get a speaker—any speaker to speak about anything, just so as to have another speech—at the club luncheons.

Too Much Athletics.

No, the men never do anything illogical or nerve-wracking in this new modern culture of ours.

Overdoing in athletics is another cause for criticism of the modern woman. "The nervous strain of competitive sport is probably greater for women than for men. The indulgence in competitive sports seems to have little effect on the posture of women. Few of the picked British female athletes had really good chest expansion and many were anemic." The modern cult which permits violent exercise during menstruation has no sound foundation.

It is even said that marriage, which should make for nervous and mental stability, is likely, under modern conditions, when the wife insists on living an independent life, to bring its own problems. The new responsibility of domestic management, the problems and conflcts of companionate life, the spiritual complications of sex life, and the hazard of reproduction, all affect a woman's health and nervous system more profoundly than the man's.

Wailing in the Past.

So say the pundits, the guardians of our health, but I don't know. There have always been these Jeremiahs waiting about anything new. There always seems to have been something causing nervous instability. In the meantime, the population has been increasing by leaps and bounds, so the woman must have been doing her part.

Personally, I like the new woman. I don't find her so nervous or unstable. She seems to me to be looking on the world with calm and confident eyes. If above those eyes, the eyebrows are plucked, it's o. k. with me also. I think it's pretty cute.

Editor's note—Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending ten cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of The Washington Post. The pamphlets are "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "Care of the Hair and Skin."

Cocktail Jackets Made From Beads Now Are Popular

Paris (U.P.).—Beaded cocktail jackets are going to be popular for spring and summer. They are usually worn in some bright color over a navy blue or black cocktail or dinner dress.

One prominent New York hostess ordered four of these jackets—each one handmade and each in a different color—and paid $3,000 for the lot. These jackets come to just above the hips, are tightly fitted at the waist and they have three-quarter-length sleeves.

The process for making them is laborious. Tiny, shiny beads are strung by hand on a fine thread. The lines of beads are attached to one another and eventually a fitted jacket is turned out.

Senora de Lecuna, bride of the Attache of the Venezuelan Legation, has just arrived in Washington with Senor Lecuna after a sojourn of two weeks in New York City and says in perfect English that she loves America.

She is the former Senorita Carmen Carolina Torres, daughter of Dr. Gumersindo Torres, former Venezuelan Minister to Spain and Holland, and was married by proxy to Senor Lecuna in Caracas on April 6. The marriage took place in a church with Dr. Juan J. Mendoza, former Venezuelan Minister of Washington, standing for Senor Lecuna. There was a solemn ceremony and all the festivity attending a wedding—only the bridegroom missing. The bride's brother, Senor Pedro Torres, accompanied her to New York, where she was met by the bridegroom and they are now at their apartment at the Roosevelt Hotel. Her brother returned immediately to Venezuela, where he is a senior in high school, and examinations awaited him.

Senora de Lecuna is a petite person with brown hair and eyes, and a smile revealing even, white teeth. She is one of five children—three brothers and one sister—and their home is on the grounds of the Caracas Country Club. She prefers books and music to golf and tennis, however, and the one sport she especially enjoys is swimming. She is an accomplished musician and linguist, speaking French, German, English, and Italian, as well as her native Spanish.

Music had much to do with the unusual romance of Senor and Senora de Lecuna. Senor Lecuna first met Senorita Torres in January a year ago. With the Latin-American custom of always having a chaperone present when a young lady and gentleman are out together, it was not possible for him to become very well acquainted with her in the brief time before the following March, when he was to come to this country for his first diplomatic post.

Being a musician and also a resourceful person, Senor Lecuna offered to give Senorita Torres piano lessons, to which both she and her father agreed. In February they became engaged and the next month the prospective bridegroom sailed for the United States. They had not seen each other since until she arrived as his bride in New York City April 15.

The past two weeks they have been at the Waldorf-Astoria there and have visited museums, attended the theater and concerts and visited some of the city's night clubs.

It is Senora de Lecuna's first trip to this country, but she has read so much of its history, past and present, that she feels quite at home already.

Senor Lecuna, who is a composer as well as a pianist, received a cable this week notifying him that the Russian pianist, Tatiana de Sanzevitch, had offered two of his compositions, "Joropo," a Venezuelan dance, "Kindergarten and a Waltz," on a program at the Salle Gaveau in Paris.

Senor and Senora Juan Lecuna, who were photographed in their apartment at the Roosevelt Hotel, have just returned from two weeks spent in New York City.

Wife of Secretary of Commerce Entertains With Her Last "At Home" of Current Season

Home Grown Spring Flowers Used for Gala Social Affair; Notables Attend Mrs. Roper's Party.

Flowers—lilacs, tulips, roses, snapdragons, Japanese iris and carnations—were everywhere about the rooms of the home of Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper yesterday afternoon for the last "at home" of the season at which Mrs. Roper received.

The hostess was as pleased as were her guests at the quantity of lavender lilacs which she had in the drawing room, sun porch and dining room for they had all come from her own garden, as had the tulips. There were large bouquets and small bouquets in such profusion it seemed as though the springtime had been transplanted indoors for the occasion. Outside, as guests came up the steps of the two terraces leading to the house on Woodland avenue, they remarked the white dogwood tree in full bloom on the lawn as well as two Japanese maples unfolding their red leaves.

Mrs. Roper wore a gown of black net embroidered in white, made with a short jacket with elbow-length sleeves and a full skirt falling in a short train. Her corsage was of gardenias and she wore a necklace of three strands of pearls.

Public to See Famous Homes On Foxhall Road

Never before opened to the public, the Foxhall road homes to be shown tomorrow afternoon from 2:30 to 6 o'clock promise something new to the thousands of Washingtonians who drive by these secluded show places along this winding road.

There is an increased interest just now in the home of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, recently appointed Minister to Norway. This residence, Uplands, is at one end of Foxhall road and will be included in the tour.

Italy's Envoy, Wife Hosts At Musicale

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Ambassador of Italy and Donna Matilda de Suvich last night entertained members of the Italy-American Society at a musicale following a dinner they gave in honor of Antonia Brico and Laura Archera, the artists of the evening.

The music room of the embassy with its lofty ceilings, marble doorways colorful Italian paintings and heavy red damask draperies was the setting for the concert.

Both Miss Brico and Miss Archera were dressed in black and wore corsages of orchids. Miss Brico wore a black velvet jacket over her satin gown and Miss Archera's frock was of taffeta, close fitting with a brief flaring peplum at the hips and a deep full flounce forming the bottom of the skirt. The Ambassador introduced her and Miss Brico, noted orchestra leader, who conducted several of the Watergate concerts last summer, but who last night was presented in her less familiar role as pianist. She and Miss Archera, young violinist, who has been in this country only five months, played a joint program. Their numbers included the Beethoven Sonata in C Minor for piano and violin, of which they played all four movements; a Kreisler arrangement of a Tortini fugue; a Mozart rondo, "Dance Espagnole," by De Salle; aria from Mattheson, and also "Mose Fantasia on G String," by Paganini.

Ladies from the embassy who assisted were the Marchioness of Sant' Orsola, who wore a gown of flowered crepe; Contess Roberti, who wore gray chiffon with a band of yellow flowers at the neck; and Senora Coppola, who was in a gown of black.

Following the musicale the doors of the dining room were opened and the guests gathered for the buffet supper. Bouquets of tulips and other spring flowers decorated the table which extended the entire length of the room.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Cuniburti, Miss Janet Richards, Mrs. E. A. Harriman, Baroness von Below, in gray satin; Mrs. Arthur Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Halstead, Mrs. Eldor King and her brother-in-law, Mr. S. A. Duval; Senor Valverde of Dominican legation; Mrs. Martin Wyatt Porter, Col. Sedrick Johnson, Mme. Espaillet, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, 3d, with Count de Blackmere; Miss Virginia Bowie, Dr. Meade Bolton MacBride.

Col. Wade Cooper, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Dr. and Mrs. Nelson Darton, Mrs. Jacob L. Loose, Miss Cynthia Hill, Mr. and Mrs. John McClure, Miss Angelica Remey, Mr. Kemp Slaughter, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Count Biondi Fumasoni Biodi, and Miss Meta Evans, who is secretary of the society.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Sometime within a day or two the First Lady will leave by plane for the West Coast. It is to be an absolutely personal trip, off the record and all that, with perhaps the exception of one public appearance in Seattle when the mayor will gather together the members of the leading clubs and organizations for a mass meeting in the Civic Auditorium, on May 5. The rest of the visit will be devoted to the John Boettigers, who have a lovely home outside of Seattle overlooking the Sound.

The White House will be quiet with Mrs. Roosevelt in the West and the President away fishing off the Texas coast, until May 14. Then Mrs. Roosevelt will be home and will receive wives of a textile group then in the city. The same day she will be entertained by the ladies of the Seventy-fifth Congress.

The fate of the curtains in the East Room is still hanging in the balance, and some of the aides who have been hoping to get their hands on the discarded draperies (one had the brilliant idea of having a dressing gown made of his portion while yet another thought of fondly packing his spoils away to hand down to posterity) will simply have to wait until the fall. It seems that even though the color of the new refurbishments has been selected, the method of hanging, pinching, tucking and tying back, etc., can not be agreed upon—so-o-ooo-o-o.

Mrs. Bruce Wallace created quite a furor the other morning when she stopped in a nearby drug store. The morning was speedily slipping by, when she realized that she had just about two minutes in which to snatch a bite to eat and then keep an engagement. Hence the trip to the drug store. As she was making her selection from the menu, the counter boy asked if she would have the eggs "on both sides." She raised her British eyebrows at this, whereupon the c. b. added—"You know, turned over,—both sides—sunny side up, etc."

To this Mrs. W. asked—"Oh, you mean on its back?" That seemed to settle that and when our friend's cup of tea was served with the usual little American bag of tea on the side, she wanted to know whether it was "dunking" tea.

Janet Hartz downtown on F street with three friends yesterday morning looked the very spirit of spring, in her trim little outfit, and her short curls tossed in the early breezes, unbound by any headgear.

Hurrying down past the Willard we saw a snappy looking town car, of the smaller species, that had just drawn up to the curb. The chauffeur slid out and was about to open the door for none other than Princess Alice Longworth, who was in dark blue with a handsome scarf of martens nestled close to her chin.

Studio House Tea Takes on Reunion Air

Last of Series Held Under Direction of Adele Smith.

By Dudley Harmon.

Combination teas and exhibits at Studio House have become almost a Washington institution during the past year, and yesterday another—the last in a series—was held under management of Adele K. Smith. It was something in the nature of a reunion as Mrs. Francis Biddle, wife of the former chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, came down from Philadelphia for the event, and many of her friends were there yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Biddle came to see the work of Mateo Hernandez, painter, sculptor, and sketcher of wild animals, partly because her sister, Cornelia Chapin, studies with him in Paris. A poet of reputation under the name of Katherine Garrison Chapin, Mrs. Biddle in October published her last book of verse. She is staying with Miss Mary Winslow, but will leave today for Philadelphia and then New York, where she will attend the dinner Monday of the Pulitzer Prize Committee.

Not content with writing only poetry, Mrs. Biddle branched out into lecturing about it recently, and now gives a weekly radio talk. She doesn't see why good poetry, well read, shouldn't be as pleasant to the ear as music, and already literature classes in schools and colleges are tuning in on her program en masse.

Among those who poured yesterday were Mrs. Edwin Smith and Mrs. Malcolm Ross, of Alexandria, whose husbands have come in for a lot of publicity lately, as Mr. Smith is a member of the National Labor Relations Board and Mr. Ross is its publicity director.

Others pouring during the afternoon were Miss Winslow, Mrs. McCook Knox, wearing black with cherries on her hat; Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, with practically a whole flower garden on her hat; Mrs. Dean Acheson and Mrs. Frederick Sands.

The Army Relief Horse Show at Fort Myer Gardens has been postponed until May 31, instead of the two-day show originally planned for May 30 and 31.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Josephine Hutchinson and George Brent Do Excellent Work in a Grim Play of the Hill Country and Parental Bigotry; Two Callers Drop in to Say Something of an Actors Fund Benefit; Fathers and Sons Get Together for Their Big Show Tonight; Current Amusement Notes.

IT WOULD be difficult to attest to the allegation that the life of a drama desk is just "one continuous round of pleasure," but it certainly is a life of vivid contrasts.

For instance, I can think of no two pictures farther apart in concept and treatment than "Wake Up and Live," which was screened for the ladies and gentlemen of the press by the Loew interests on Tuesday, and "Mountain Justice," unwound for the same group in the private projection room of the Warners in the Earle Theater Building yesterday. The one is a gay and musical frolic; the other a grim tragedy of the hillbillies and their peculiarly constricted points of view with regard to filial obligations, parental freedom from restraint and the legal consequences of acts that are wholly justified—or, at least, partially so.

BELL.

They may print that foreword to the effect that "Mountain Justice" is purely fictitious if they wish—and they evidently do—but there still is a strong analogy between the case presented by the motion picture and one that has engaged a tremendous amount of attention from the local press with its focal point in Wise, Va.

The development of the fictional and the actual events is not identical. There is, nevertheless, so strong a parallel of essential climaxes that it is impossible not to mistrust that the fabricators of the celluloid plot were conscious of the newspaper case when they formulated their narrative.

As usual, this department has no intention of attempting a complete review of this subject within a few hours of the time of its preview. That will come along on Saturday, unless your luck changes. It will go so far as to say, however, that "Mountain Justice" manages to create and sustain with remarkable fidelity the atmosphere and the viewpoint of the remote mountain regions with which it vagueiy deals.

Furthermore, the story is one of such substantial fiber as to afford Josephine Hutchinson perhaps the best opportunity she has had in the cinema. While this may not with equal honesty be said of George Brent, cast in the opposite role, it may be of Robert Barratt, who does an uncommonly fine and vicious piece of character portrayal as the abusive father, hoist by his own petard. Elisabeth Risdon and that incomparably fine juvenile actress, Marcia Mae Jones, are no less forceful.

This amazingly potent child actress, Marcia Mae Jones, incidentally, is the youngster who played the part of the scared child in "These Three," the film version of the Hellman stage play of "The Children's Hour," in which she was coerced into total subservience by that other priceless adolescent actress, Bonita Granville.

One of the outstanding features of "Mountain Justice," it may be said as a practically final word, is the clarity and depth of its outdoor photography. There are scenes in this picture, fleeting though they may be, that seem to possess all of the illusive charm of a third dimension.

If a last summation is in point, I should place "Mountain Justice" in the same category as the grimly suspenseful film play of "Fury," in which the principal roles were played by Sylvia Sidney and Spencer Tracy. It embodies the same sort of mob psychology and dramatic furore.

• • • •

Mrs. Gardner postcards this desk, inquiring why we have written nothing about "Maytime," contending that Nelson Eddy does an incomparable piece of work in this filmization of the Romberg operetta, making no mention of Jeanette MacDonald, but bearing down heavily on the John Barrymore prowess as head of the supporting cast. Ye Gods! And after all the columns that have been written here in extollation of this splendidly acted, sung, directed, photographed and recorded subject! Such is fame! What's the use? I give up! Or something like that!

• • • •

And, almost immediately after the preview of "Mountain Justice," who should pop into the office but our old friend, Ben Atwell, and that veteran publicist of the drama, Robert Campbell, the dean of American press agents. Mr. Atwell is avant couriering, in a manner of speaking, in behalf of the Shubert production of the Ziegfeld "Follies," a few paces in the wake of Joe Flynn, and Mr. Campbell represents the Actors Fund of America.

It seems that the "Follies" is to present a special Actors Fund benefit matinee on Friday afternoon, May 14, in the National Theater. This performance will be at the regular scale of prices and being a charitable benefit will not assess any amusement tax. The whole show will be put on—Fannie Brice, Bobby Clarke, Marian Martin and all the rest—without curtailment. For the first time in recent years Daniel Frohman, dean of the American theater and for many years head of the Actors Fund, will not be present for one of his benefits. Mrs. Roosevelt bought the first two tickets.

I recall as the best of the benefits ever put on under the Dan Frohman auspices the one that was staged in the Belasco Theater on March 5, following the first inauguration of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. There were on that bill, among many others, Noel Coward and Beatrice Lillie, the Duncan Sisters, Fannie Ward, William Faversham, Cecilia Loftus, Leo Carrillo and scores more. I hope this one may be as successful.

Tonight is the night when the Fathers and Sons Banquet, sponsored by the Hebrew Congregation of Washington, under the general chairmanship of Sidney Lust, is to be held in the Mayflower Hotel. This year's program will be the most elaborate ever put on for the edification of the dads and their youthful offspring. E. Lawrence Phillips, owner of the Johnny J. Jones Exposition, now showing in Washington, will supply a formidable array of "freak" attractions; members of the Washington baseball team will be present; there will be acts of various sorts from the local theaters and surprises to an astonishing number. This is one of the most admirable enterprises of which I know, and engenders a spirit of camaraderie that has no counterpart in Washington home and social life. I suggest that you be there—if you can get in!

During the anniversary celebration now being observed at the Tivoli Theater, Fourteenth street and Park road northwest, the console of the triple-manual organ is being presided over by Nell Paxton, one of the veteran artists of the old Crandall organization that built the Tivoli back in 1924.

Mrs. Paxton is a musician to her fingertips—even beyond that, no doubt—and shares with Milton Davis the honor of having made more people happy with her music in Crandall theaters than any other organist. It is good to see her back. My only regret is that it is for only one week.

Play Leads in a Grim Drama

By the Associated Press.

Pecos, Tex., April 28.—A young gunman who held up a Texas & Pacific freight train crew revived for a few exciting hours the rip-roaring days when six-shooters were "the law West of the Pecos."

The incident last night became known when a suspect was taken before a grand jury here today.

Trainmen told Sheriff Louis Roberson the gunman surprised them in their cab and forced them at pistol point to leap from the 50-car train. Engineer Walter Dehlinger said he shut the throttle before he jumped. The holdup man fired at the trainmen as they fled.

"We're going for a ride," G. H. McKnight, fireman, said the gunman told him as he was forced back into the cab and ordered to start the train again. He said the man set the cab on fire as he attempted to get under way again.

McKnight said he extinguished the blaze and jumped again amid a rain of pistol fire. Had the train proceeded, he told officers, it would have collided with a fast freight.

Trainmen organized a group of transients and rushed the engine, but they were unable to find the gunman. Officers said they believed he had hidden in a box car and ridden to Toyah, where Sheriff Roberson and a posse arrested a suspect three hours later.

Golfer's Husband Fined $750 in Fla.

Tallahassee, Fla., April 28 (AP).—The State Pardon Board today released John Crews, Miami bond dealer and estranged husband of Golfer Maureen Orcutt Crews, from serving a 30-day jail sentence for contempt of court but directed him to pay a $750 fine within 10 days.

Crews originally was sentenced to serve 120 days in jail for telling a litigant in Judge W. W. Tramell's court at Miami his friendship with the magistrate could influence a decision. The State Supreme Court upheld Crews' sentence.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, April 28.—Settin' Around (Paramount): Get ready for history on the screen, folks. It's going to be crammed down our throats, because one or two such pictures proved great box office hits and that means there will be more of them.

RANDOLPH SCOTT.

I met Cecil B. DeMille inside the Paramount gates today, and he agrees that we are in for a cycle of biographical movies painting the lives of famous historical figures. More Buffalo Bills and Wild Bill Hickoks and Louis Pasteurs and Flo Ziegfelds are going to come to life on the screen than you can shake a stick at. If the producers have their way, we are going to know more about people of the last century than we do about what is happening today.

I had a shock on the set where "Night of Mystery" is being filmed. Grant Richards, who plays Philo Vance, looks so much like the late John Gilbert, it is like seeing a ghost. A chauffeur who used to work for Gilbert came on the set a few days ago and turned white as a sheet at sight of Richards. Then he applied to the actor for a job. "I can't afford a chauffeur," Richards laughed. "You'll be able to afford one soon," urged the driver, "because you look so much like Mr. Gilbert, I got a funny hunch you're going to be a star. And I'm looking for a job that will last."

On the set where Marlene Dietrich is starring in "Angel," I heard a concert that wasn't called for in the script. Between scenes Director Ernst Lubitsch sat at a piano and played "Awake In a Dream." After a moment Marlene joined him and sang. Whereupon the company declared a sit-down strike and listened to something money could not buy.

Marlene has a sense of humor. For one of her closeups someone had to read a maid's lines off-stage so that she could time her dialogue. The maid wasn't on call so Lubitsch read her part. Marlene muffed her dialogue in one take after another, until the director finally tumbled to the fact that she was doing it on purpose.

"What is this?" he roared. "Are you trying to make monkey business?" "No," gasped Marlene, shaking with glee, "I futht think you have the thweeteth lithp!"

I watched Irene Dunne and Randy Scott working in "High, Wide and Handsome." For one scene, Randy staged a rough-and-tumble with three huskies. The battle took place on a narrow bridge, and it was fast and furious. When the fracas was over, the director beamed. "Great acting, Randy," he said.

"Acting?" panted Randy. "Acting, hell! These guys bet me five bucks they could throw me off the bridge!"

Langston School Seeks Right to Confer Degrees

District Court was petitioned yesterday to issue an order requiring the Board of Education to issue a license authorizing the John M. Langston Law School, of Frelinghuysen University, to confer degrees on the graduates.

The petition recited that the Board of Education's investigating committee had rejected an application for the authority because the school was not in operation, and, secondly, because its library facilities were allegedly inadequate. Louis Rothschild, attorney representing the university, contended the first ground cited was insufficient and the second improper, because the library was sufficient.

At the National Theater next week, beginning on Monday night, Ruth Draper, one of the foremost of the modern theater's character delineators, will present her program of sketches and tabloid dramas. Miss Draper, distinguished diseuse, returns to a local stage after an absence of several seasons and brings back as the piece de resistance of her entertainment that engaging skit known as "Three Women and Mr. Clifford." Miss Draper is author, as well as actress, of all her vehicles which range a wide span of subject matter. There will be the usual matinee performances on Wednesday and Saturday.

At Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, the scree stars will be Jean Harlow and Robert Taylor in "Personal Property," directed by Woody S. Van Dyke, a recent visitor in the National Capital. Reginald Owens, Una O'Connor, Henrietta Crosman, E. E. Clive and Cora Witherspoon will support the stars in a story of many comic possibilities. On the stage the bill at the Capitol will be headlined by Art Shaw and His Orchestra. Other acts will include A. Robinson, late of "Jumbo"; Helen Charleston, and the Neiss Troupe.

"Mountain Justice," vaguely based, one suspects, on the Edith Maxwell case, will be the screen feature of the bill at the Warner Brothers' Earl Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Josephine Hutchinson and George Brent appear in the pivotal roles, with Robert Barratt, Elisabeth Risdon and Guy Kibbe in key supporting parts. On the stage, the living entertainment will be headlined by Roger Pryor and His Orchestra, in connection with which several specialty acts will be introduced. Among these will be the Varsity Eight, Ames and Arno, Howard Nichols, Red Hodgeson and Edna Sedgewick.

Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Jack Haley, Alice Faye, Patsy Kelly, Ned Sparks, Walter Catlett, Grace Bradley, Leah Raye, Joan Davis, Warren Hymer and a host of others appear advantageously in "Wake Up and Live," the new Twentieth Century Fox musical production to be seen on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The bill also will include short-reel subjects and a new issue of the "News of the Day."

Edward G. Robinson will be the pictured star of the screen bill at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "Thunder in the City." Luli Destex, European star, appears in the principal feminine role. Nigel Bruce and Constance Collier also appear in the supporting cast. The story is reported to be a gripping one, in the most effective Robinson mood. Short subjects and full, 15-minute newsreel will complete the bill.

So popular have Paul Muni and Miriam Hopkins proved in the co-stellar roles of "The Woman I Love," on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater that this subject will be held over on Fifteenth street through Monday. The short-reel auxiliaries also will be continued until the opening of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Shall We Dance?"

"Ecstasy," the controversial subject of a great deal of film discussion, is repeating the record of its first engagement on the screen at the Belasco Theater. On this return engagement, it is being held for a third week. The supplementary screen items on the bill also are being retained.

On Sunday, the feature of the screen bill at the Little Theater will be changed to "Vanessa; Her Love Story," adapted from the novel by Hugh Walpole. In this revival, the principal roles are played by Washington's own Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery. The bill will be completed by short subjects and news events.

Claudette Colbert will be the pictured star of the screen bill at the Rialto Theater for the week beginning Sunday in "Private Worlds," one of the most dramatic subjects in which she has been cast. Charles Boyer, Joan Bennett and Helen Vinson appear in the leading supporting roles. As a companion attraction, the bill will embrace, "If I Had a Million," one of the most amusing of modern comedies—also a revival.

A new program of newsreel shots and short-reel subjects will be inaugurated at the Trans-Lux Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. As usual, the bill will be diversified and interesting with "The March of Time," "Britain's Food Defense" and "Blue Velvet Music" listed as important subjects.

At the Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the customary Sunday matinee, the burlesque bill will be featured by the stunning Evelyn Myers, with "Peanuts" Bohn in the chief comedy role. These two will be supported by a considerable cast of comedians, singers and dancers, with the production staged by Col. James J. Lake.

Midshipmen Tour To Begin June 4

The Navy Department announced yesterday the itinerary for the midshipmen's practice cruise during the summer, with visits to Germany, Greece and Italy. The 1,130 members of the Academy's first and third classes will embark on the battleships New York, Arkansas and Wyoming at Anhapolis June 4 and will land at Kiel, Germany, June 21.

After eight days at Kiel, the ships will proceed to Athens, where they will arrive July 14. Two days later they will sail for Liverno, Italy, arriving on July 21. Eight days later, the midshipmen will sail for Hampton Roads, Va., landing August 14, and proceeding to New York a week later. After two days at New York, the ships will arrive at Annapolis August 28.

From August 16 to August 21, while the ships are anchored off Hampton Roads, there will be short range battle practice on the seven drill grounds off the Virginia Capes.

At 3224 N street northwest a group of nursery-age youngsters gather with Miss Elsie Laurence, teacher. The building recently was purchased as a permanent home for the Georgetown Children's House, a day nursery for underprivileged children. NICK QUATTROCIOCCHI, who pulled that chain letter cocktail party hoax at 480 Park avenue Saturday afternoon—unaware of the suicide aftermath—left hown hurriedly . . . Victor McLaglen now is mulling over plans to appear in the stage adaptation of John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" . . . Sol Wurtzel, in giving instructions regarding the screen treatment of Will James' Western thriller, "Smoky," instructed the scenarist: "Now be very careful how you handle this. With the right treatment there's a chance for this to become the 'Over the Hill' of the Horse!"

JERRY LEWIS, who is writing a coronation story for a syndicate chain, was told that Sonny Whitney would sail to see the ceremonies at Westminster Abbey. "Mr. Whitney isn't going," Lewis was told by one of Sonny's household employes. "Perhaps Mr. Jock Whitney is going" . . . Lewis immediately phoned the home of Mrs. Payne Whitney, and spoke to at least 20 of the servants without obtaining a line of confirmation. After desperate, repeated phone calls, he finally spoke to the Whitney chauffeur . . . "We are not at liberty to say," the chauffeur stated, "but we don't think any of the Whitneys have the slightest interest in the coronation!"

EDWARD G. ROBINSON, who was in England last year, had written a friend here that he would appear "in G. B.'s next picture" . . . Thursday morning Robinson arrived in New York on the same train with Alexander Woollcott—who congratulated him upon the fact that Shaw was writing a picture especially for him . . . "Wait a minute, you got me wrong," Robinson explained. "When I said 'G. B.' I didn't mean Shaw. I meant Gaumont-British!"

AFTER WILLIAM FAULKNER'S "SANCTUARY" was published, a Hollywood scenarist asked the novelist: "How did you become a writer?" . . . Faulkner confessed: "Well, down in my home town I had a job with the municipal water works. Near the place where I worked stood a long wheelbarrow. It stood there for weeks and weeks, until one day I turned it upside down. And that's how I became a writer—because I found out that, upside down, that wheelbarrow could serve as a very nice desk!"

THREE RACKETEERS recently were sentenced to 50-year terms by Judge Lester Patterson. On the morning of sentence day District Attorney Sam Foley, who had prosecuted the trials, confided that he had just received an important tip . . . "I hear," the prosecutor whispered to the judge, "that when you sentence these men they're going to try and attack you in open court. What'll we do about it?" . . . "There's only one thing to do," Judge Patterson suggested. "I'll sentence those rats in my private chambers. You and I will be the only others there. We'll lock the door—and then see who'll come out first!"

AT JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER'S INTERNATIONAL BUILDING there now is an exhibit of paintings by American artists. One of the largest canvases in the show is a landscape depicting a typical American highway scene. Included therein, of course, is a billboard . . . Standard Oil's. The lights went up, revealing the artist attired in a black tuxedo, black tie . . . and pink shirt!

GEORGE S. KAUFMAN went to Indiana to dine with Booth Tarkington. At the dinner table a young lady gushed: "Oh, Mr. Kaufman, of all your plays I've enjoyed 'Dulcey' the most. Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

At no time does shrewd play of the cards pay higher dividends than when the player has deliberately bid for a sacrifice. A one-trick penalty, whether vulnerable or not vulnerable, is a splendid bargain. If the 200-point vulnerable penalty, however, is raised to 500 points by inexpert play, the sacrifice may well have been in vain.

West, dealer.

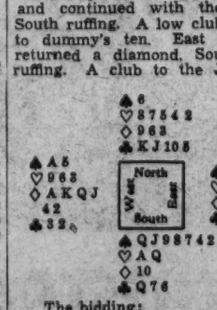
South's three spade bid was not bad; the four spade bid, however, was a distinct stretch. Even the normal and healthy desire to save a rubber can be indulged too far. As it happened, the particular dummy he picked up supplied help where it could do the most good, namely, in his three-card club suit.

West opened the diamond King and continued with the Queen. South ruffing. A low club was led to dummy's ten. East won and returned a diamond. South again ruffing. A club to the Jack permitted declarer to lead once toward his own hand and he did not make the mistake of wasting this opportunity on the heart finesse which could be deferred until later. The singleton spade was declarer's choice and, when East played low, declarer finessed against the ten. Since there would be no further opportunity to lead spades from dummy this was a sound play.

On the bidding it appeared probable that the Ace and King of spades were split between the East and West hands, and from East's final penalty double it was likely that he instead of West held the ten-spot. There was, of course, no assurance of this, but my readers are recommended to this type of play as a general practice when only one trump is in dummy and the problem is to hold the loss to as few as possible trump tricks. After the successful finesse of the nine of spades, declarer had to lose only the spade King, since after drawing trumps he entered dummy with a third club and took the heart finesse.

If East had held up his Ace on declarer's first club lead, he could have defeated the contract one more trick by giving his partner a third round club ruff.



The bidding:

Brains Navy's Principal Need, Standley Says

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—An increasing need for higher intelligence among Navy men "in order that the United States be able to operate its warships" was stressed by Admiral William H. Standley today in one of the rare interviews of his long career.

The admiral, who retired less than four months ago as the Navy's chief of operations, discussed its modern problems before he sailed for Europe today. He will see the British fleet review May 21 and the coronation.

Because of "the importance of Americans understanding the new needs of the Navy," Admiral Standley broke a usually strict rule of silence, especially one he feels retired admirals should impose on themselves.

"A modern vessel of war is one of the most elaborate and complicated mechanisms man ever devised," said the signer of the London 1936 naval treaty. "It has become many times more complicated than it was only 10 years ago."

He pointed out that today the entire Navy burns oil and brains are replacing brawn in the firerooms; that in a decade aircraft have been placed on nearly all types of ships, and that gunnery has become an intricate science with "a battleship firing at targets 30,000 yards away and planes correcting the fall of her salvos."

Over 40 per cent of present first-year enlisted men are high school graduates and about 80 per cent have had some high school education.

"Fifty years ago, we would not think of high school graduates joining the Navy," said Admiral Standley. "I can remember spending hours on an old drill field trying to teach signals to men of 30 or 40 who didn't know the alphabet."

Although industrialization of the Nation has drawn on many young men interested in mechanical pursuits, the admiral held that the Navy offers more opportunities because "of the stand labor unions are taking against apprenticeships."

Court Plan Motive Is Hit by Wheeler

Rochester, N. Y., April 28 (AP).—Carrying his fight against President Roosevelt's judiciary reorganization proposals before a mass meeting here last night, Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, declared the motive behind the program is that the Administration wants assurance that New Deal legislation, "well drafted or poorly drafted," will be declared constitutional.

Senator Wheeler, while scoffing at any who charge that President Roosevelt aspires to be a dictator, assailed the method the Chief Executive has proposed to bring about changes in the high court.

He cited Chief Justice Brandeis, oldest member of the tribunal, as a refutation of the theory that age renders a justice unfit and decreases his liberalism and recalled that Chief Justice Hughes, in a letter read at a Judiciary Committee hearing, had pointed out that the court is well up with its schedule of work.

"Lysistrata," that hardy old Greek farce by a young fellow by the name of Aristophanes, was given a thoroughly metropolitan production and performance by the Washington Civic Theater before a capacity audience in the Wardman Park Theater last night.

Heretofore, we have held the high point of achievement of this new resident acting group to have been their interpretation of George Bernard Shaw's "Antony and Cleopatra." We now revise that appraisal to place "Lysistrata" at the head of their seven productions so far this season.

"Lysistrata" was played last evening with a complete command of lines, action and pace. It was speeded up to the tempo that such a venerable farce requires and there was little stumbling around for lines apparent to those sitting even in the front rows of the orchestra. What little there was was of no consequence whatever in the smooth-running effect of the play.

Runs at Top Speed.

It seems to this typewriter that it is an accomplishment of note for a newly formed band to put on a comedy with long a cast as this one requires and still keep the two acts going at top speed. That, nevertheless, was done last night. The enthusiasm with which their work was greeted must have been a source of vast gratification to those in the cast as well as those concerned with their direction and the staging of the play.

The story of this quaint adventure in the ramblings of the feminine mind, of course, has been known through the ages—how the women of Athens, Sparta, Thebes and Corinth conspired to end the war between Athens and Sparta by a punctilious, but almost impossible, recession from the amorous overtures of their returning warriors, home on leave.

There can be no gainsaying that this item is the most provocative and most daring of any that the Civic Theater has undertaken. Its lines are charged with high explosives and its situtaions, toward the end of the last act, partake a bit of the flavor of frank sensualism. But it is all good fun. There is almost literally a laugh in every line and last evening the members of the cast realized every intention of the writer of the dialogue and the inventor of the scenes.

In the title role Amy Veerhoff did a particularly potent piece of serio-comic miming, shading her reading nicely and realizing the full import of her vibrant lines. The same may be said of Bunnie Skinner, in the role of Kalonika, who had not quite the courage of her connubial convictions, and of Helen Goodhue, who did an immensely effective job as Lampito, the "hard-berled" Spartan, responsible for much of the play's most hilarious comedy.

There are so many others on the roster of this play that to single out individual favorites seems as endless and as thankless a task as a reviewer could assume. Anne Ives, John Rappolt, Joe N. Bourne, Harry Westcott, president of the Senate; Leonard Levenson, Dorothea Lewis, John B. Reynold and the youngster, Douglas Warner, all acquitted themselves with fine credit—as did all the rest of the farce's multitude of characters.

One of the novelties of the presentation is the utilization of the aisles of the theater as entrances and exits for many of the principal players. This adds a zest to the goings-on that was greatly enjoyed and applauded by the representative audience present last night.

Altogether, I rank "Lysistrata" as the best thing the Civic Theater has done in its first year of operation and a play so admirably executed that it well may command the attention of any seasoned theatergoer, inured only to "big-time" offerings.

Derby Data.

The boom of a drum sounded amid Kentucky's hills one afternoon in May, 1875, 15 thoroughbreds lunged from the barrier and Louisville's first Kentucky Derby was being enacted.

POVICH.

Yeah, they started 'em with a drum, those days when Ulysses S. Grant was in the White House, the horse car was the latest thing in locomotion, and no gentleman's wardrobe was complete without the latest creations in snuff boxes.

The Derby has come a long way since that first Derby Day in '75. Sixty renewals have been run since and the sixty-third Derby is on the calendar a week from tomorrow. Maytime is Derby time in Louisville. Only once—in 1900—was the Derby ever staged in any other month.

Aristides had to race a mile and a half to win that first Kentucky Derby. That was the distance of the classic for 20 years until it was arbitrarily shortened in 1895 to a mile and a quarter, the present route. Aristides was running for a $2,850 purse in '75. The horse that takes fourth money this season will top that figure.

The Derby hit its monetary high spot in 1928 when Mrs. Hertz's famed Reigh Count out-finished the Lemar Farm's Misstep and Ned McLean's Toro to take down a $55,375 purse on a track heavy from rains.

That race also saw a record Derby field of 22 starters, a striking contrast to ancient Derby history which records that only three colts faced the barrier in 1892 and 1899. Zev beat a field of 21 in 1923 and 21 were running when Clyde Van Dusen galloped hrough the mud to glorify the blood lines of Man o' War with a Derby victory in '29.

The first Derby and the second, too, were formula affairs with even-money favorites winning. Derby odds on a winner reached their low in 1881 when the famed Hindoo outdistanced the field and paid his backers only 3 to 10.

Donerail, the 1913 winner, was the longest shot ever to take a Derby, paying $184.90 for each $2 ticket. Zev, the 19-to-1 shot winner in 1923 and Bold Venture, last year's winner at 20 to 1, were the longest shots of modern years. Only one favorite has scored in the last five Derbys—Cavalcade, which buck-jumped home for Mrs. Dodge Sloan in 1934.

Modern fans know the Derby tracks only as fast, good, heavy, slow, sloppy or muddy, but ancient Derby fans were always advised in more detail. Old-time Derby charts often carried the condition of the track on Derby Day as "Dusty," a shade faster than slow.

Only three sons of Derby winners have been able to win Derbys. Alan-a-Dale, sired by Halma, the '95 winner, turned the trick in 1902; Bubbling Over's (1926) Burgoo King did it in 1932, and in 1935, Omaha repeated the Derby success of Gallant Fox, the 1930 champion.

Post-time Derby favorites have races with tolerable success. Twenty-eight times in the 61 runnings the favorite has galloped down in front, and 17 times the public choice has finished second. Three times the favorite has taken third money. On 15 occasions the betting choice was unplaced.

Old Rosebud's record of 2:03 2-5 for the mile-and-a-quarter ristance stood for seven years until Twenty Grand traversed the route in 2:01 4-5 in 1931.

Tribe Wins, 7-2; Harder Gives 5 Hits

Averill Hits Home Run With Bases Full in Third Inning.

White Sox Rally in 9th to Forestall Hurler's Shutout Try.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, April 28.—Mel Harder held the Chicago White Sox to five hits today to show that his ailing arm of last year no longer ails, and Earl Averill hit a home run with the bases full to quiet muttering about his weak hitting so far this season as the Indians defeated Chicago, 7 to 2.

Harder held the White Sox to two hits until the ninth inning, when both Rosenthal and Bonura doubled and Appling singled to score the two runs which kept Harder from a shutout victory.

Averill's home run in the third brought in four of the runs in the Indians' five-run rally of that inning. Harder and Lary singled and Hughes beat out a bunt to occupy all the bases and provide the setting for the smash.

Singles by Trosky, Hale and Campbell, scoring another run, completed the havoc of that inning. John Rigney, the 6-foot 2-inch rookie of the White Sox, replaced Lee and held the Indians to three hits in a little more than five innings in the box. He fanned five Cleveland batters and allowed only one walk.

Lee gave up nine hits and six runs in his short stay on the mound.

Hot Springs, Va., April 28 (AP).—Horace Orser, of Perrysburg, Ohio, scored an upset today when he defeated Gilbert Hunt, seeded seventh in the Hot Springs Annual Tennis Tournament, 6—1, 4—6, 6—1.

Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, of Atlanta, had little difficulty disposing of Edward De Gray, of New York, 6—2, 6—3, in another second round engagement. Grant drew a bye yesterday.

Mary Cootes, of Alexandria, Va., defeated Mrs. Serita Winthrop, of Charlottesville, Va., 6—4, 4—6, 6—3.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Squirming uncomfortably in formal stiff-bossomed shirts and winged collars, damp perspiration coursing down their flaming brows, Georgetown University's athletes heard lavish praise heaped on their collective heads last night at the tenth annual varsity "G" dinner, a brilliant affair, attended by many distinguished guests, and easily one of the most successful ever held.

The burly boys who bore the Blue and Gray through innumerable bloody and grueling athletic battles probably never before realized their true worth to their alma mater until husky Harvey J. Harman, Pennsylvania football coach, and J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of Currency, extolled their virtues.

Harman, a massive man with a booming voice to fit, deviated momentarily from his chosen path to indict the setup of physical education as detrimental to the development of good athletes. He told his audience specialization has no place in college athletics, and condemned those coaches who confine their charges to one branch of sport.

O'Connor urged the boys to be honest, to be prepared and to apply themselves whole-heartedly to the immediate task at hand if they would be successful in life. He advised to take the bitter with the sweet without complaint, to overcome obstacles by perseverance.

"Victory can destroy you," he said, "but not defeat if you have the courage to persevere."

The Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown, also addressed the guests, reiterating the confidence in the present coaching regime and predicting a bright future for the Hoyas. The Rev. John J. Kehoe, S. J., faculty moderator of athletics, presented the awards.

Entertainment was supplied by George OConnor, who brought down the house; the Georgetown Glee Club and orchestra.

Dodgers Rout Giants, 3 to 2; Mungo Shines

Pop Bottle and Near Fight Marks Game; Brooklyn Beats Schumacher.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—Van Lingle Mungo and the Brooklyn Dodgers evened matters with their archrivals, the Giants, today by coming through with a 3-to-2 victory while limiting the National League champions to three hits.

The victory was a double triumph for Mungo. With his catching choice, Randy Moore, behind the plate replacing the ailing Babe Phelps, the fireball right-hander outpitched Hal Schumacher, who bested him in a hurling duel on the season's opening day.

At that, the question-mark Brooklyn infield barely held together to give Mungo his first victory in three starts. Sporting a 3-1 lead in the ninth, the Dodgers weakened and allowed a Giant run to cross on a walk, Woody English's error and a forceout at second. With the tying run on first base, however, Rookie Jack McCarthy filed out to end the game.

The resumption of the Brooklyn-Giant rivalry was marked by a couple of hostile touches. One was contributed by a fan who hurled a pop bottle at Brooklyn Manager Burleigh Grimes, in the third-base coaching box. The bottle landed at Grimes' feet and he picked it up and put it in his back pocket for filing among his souvenirs.

By the United Press.

New York, April 28.—Big blond Jack Torrance, former world champion shot-putter, tonight made a dismal debut in big-time pugilism by suffering a technical knockout in the second round of his scheduled six-round bout with huge Abe Simon, of Brooklyn, at the Hippodrome.

This battle of the behemoths, in which each man scaled more than 250 pounds, lasted only until 1 minute 2 seconds of the second round, when Referee Arthur Donovan halted the affair after Torrance had been floored three times.

Three ponderous left hooks to Torrance's chin accounted for Jack's three trips to the canvas. Each time he crashed to the floor in sections, like a toppling brick smokestack. Clouds of resin rose as he landed. He was lying stretched on his stomach when Referee Donovan motioned to the knock-down timekeeper that the battle was over.

Although the Behemoth of the Bayous lost his first fight in five professional starts, it must be admitted for Jack's credit that he made a fair showing in the first round, which was a savage battering affair, with both throwing plenty of punches.

Simon, a big, muscle-bound, brown-haired chap with peculiarly sunken cheeks and a prominent chin that gave him the appearance of a Neanderthal man, staggered Jack in the opening session with one of his barn-door lefts and had the Goliath from Baton Rouge, La., retreating like a Percheron truck horse for a time. Although the blow knocked out Jack's mouthpiece, Torrance fought back undaunted and set Simon back on his heels with three hard rights to the chin.

In the main event, Arturo Godoy, Chilean heavyweight, won the ten-round decision over Tony Galento, 221½-pound ginmill proprietor of Newark, N. J. This was an old-fashioned Pier 6 brawl and probably the roughest bout ever staged at the Hippodrome. In the closing stages both battlers were bleeding profusely from cuts.

Although both men whaled away from gong to gong, the only semblance of a knockdown came in the second round, when the Chilean half slipped to the floor for no count. Arturo lost that round, anyway, for low punching.

Vines' Serves Defeat Perry At Maryland

Briton Is Beaten in 3 Sets, 5-7, 6-3, 7-5 on Foe's Bountiful Aces.

Fred Perry, the Englishman, was "still seein' baseballs" during his tennis match with Ellsworth Vines last night at the University of Maryland, and Mr. Vines struck him out with some fast pitches off his racquet, 5—7, 6—3, 7—5.

Fred had seen his first baseball game only a few hours before when the Yanks walloped the Nats, 6-1, and it had made quite an impression.

"All he has to do," he explained to Umpire Tom Mangan, "is wait till I lose my service. I can't do much against his."

Crowd Is Small.

The scanty crowd of 800 who paid about $1,000 to see the nomadic netmen was probably ready to attest to this at the finish. Aces and near aces cannonaded off the Californian's racquet like hits off Yankee bats and easily were the deciding factor of the match which, incidentally, was Ellsworth's 27th victory against 24 for Fred in their 51 professional matches.

Shortly before he began playing, the sharp-featured Briton calmly admitted that "Ellie and myself are the world's best tennis players."

"We've proved it," he said. "I've improved terrifically in the past year."

He hadn't improved enough, however, to spank the vicious driving Vines, although the Californian dropped the first set after coming up from 3-5 to deuce the match.

Lott Wins Match.

In the second set, Vines banged over his service with blood and thunder, taking leads of 3—0, 4—1 and 5—2, sweeping out on his service with a love game.

Games went on service in the third set until the eleventh game, when Vines broke the Englishman's delivery with the aid of a double-fault and a wild volley on the final point. Vines won four straight points to take the match in the next game after trailing love—30.

Vines and Perry paraded to a 7—5, 6—2 victory in the finals over Lott and Barnes.

Doerr, Red Sox Rookie Released from Hospital

Boston, April 28 (AP).—Bobby Doerr, rookie second baseman of the Boston Red Sox, was released today from St. Elizabeth's Hospital, where he had been held 48 hours for observation.

Doerr was struck on the head by a pitched ball during Monday's game with the Washington Nats, but appeared to suffer no ill effects beyond a slight concussion, and was pronounced fit to resume play.

Griffith, Yankees' Pilot Confer; Trade Is Seen

Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, and Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, conferred at length at Griffith Stadium yesterday afternoon, lending credence to reports that a player trade between the two clubs is imminent.

Griffith denied that he had made any overtures for Red Ruffing, hold-out Yankee pitcher, but admitted that he had been interested in Walter Brown, of the Yankees' staff. The absence of Outfielder Jake Powell from the Yankees' lineup has also stirred reports that the Yankees will consider a trade for him.

Roxie Lawson Scores His Second Victory of Year in One-Sided Game.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 28 (AP).—Tiger batsmen raked four St. Louis pitchers for 15 hits, including Gerald Walker's second home run of the season, today, taking the Browns into camp, 11 to 5, before 10,000 spectators.

Roxie Lawson, hurling his second victory, went the route for the Tigers, although the Browns touched him for four two-base hits and seven singles.

Oral Hildebrand, starting for St. Louis, was chased in the second inning when he allowed four hits and forced two runs across the plate with walks. Earl Caldwell, who relieved him, was lifted for a pinch hitter in the fourth, and Russ Van Atta and Les Tietje followed. Tietje was the victim of a four-run Tiger outburst in the seventh.

Knee Ligament Is Torn Sliding; 10 Walks Help Foes; Harris Uses 16

Cascarella, Cohen, Lanahan Are All Wild and Ineffective; Gomez Yields 5 Hits, 2 of Them to Travis Before His Injury in 7th.

By Shirley Povich.

Washington expanded its losing streak to four games yesterday, but that fact is comparatively trivial. In the course of their 6-to-1 beating by New York's Yankees the Nats lost the services of Shortstop Cecil Travis.

His face distorted with pain, Travis was carried from the Griffith Stadium diamond in the seventh inning, when he injured his right knee sliding into third base. The shortstop was rushed to Georgetown University Hospital for an X-ray examination of his injury.

Ligament Torn.

The photographs disclosed a torn ligament, but no broken bones. An examining physician said that Travis probably would be on the sidelines not more than two weeks at the most.

Travis was racing from first base to third on Lewis' single in the seventh and was safe on a close play, but he lay groveling in the dirt when Umpire McGowan called time out. Unable to arise, Travis was toted from the field by a half-dozen solicitous teammates after Trainer Martin rendered first aid.

The ball game had been lost long since by the Nats, it was quite apparent. Lefty Gomez was breezing along in the comfort of a 5-to-0 lead and was showing little evidence of tiring. The Nats, to that point had made only five hits, and, in fact, that was their portion for the afternoon.

Manager Bucky Harris flung 16 players into the game, including three pitchers and three pinch hitters, but to no avail. The Yankees, benefiting by ten bases on balls, simply breezed.

Nats Get a Run.

Joe Cascarella was Harris' original pitching choice, but he lasted only five innings. Both wild and ineffective, he gave up five runs, five hits and five bases on balls. Syd Cohen, pitching the sixth and seventh, turned in a comparatively brilliant job, holding the Yanks scoreless with only one hit, but Dick Lanahan couldn't locate the plate and threw the Yankees their sixth run with three consecutive bases on balls.

Before he was forced out of the game, Travis authored two of the five hits yielded by Gomez. Myer, Millies and Lewis were the only other Nats to solve the left hander.

For one inning, it was a scoreless tie. Then the Yanks bounced in front, 2-0, when Cascarella pitched a single to Selkirk, walked Lazzeri and pitched another single to Hoag whose drive through the box scored Selkirk and sent Lazzeri to third whence he scored on an infield out.

They made it 3 to 0 in the third when Cascarella, in trouble, walked Gehrig purposely to fill the bases. Crosetti, who had started the inning with walk, scored from third on Selkirk's line drive to Chapman. Cecil Travis made a leaping catch of Hoag's liner to avert further trouble.

Gomez didn't allow a hit until the fourth, when Myer singled to left and was stranded on third, and the Yanks made it 5 to 0 in the fourth, when a pass to Rolfe was followed by singles by Roy Johnson and Lazzeri.

Eventually the Nats scored—in the seventh. They got a run on singles by Travis and Lewis and Millies' infield out, but Lanahan gave that run back to the Yanks in the eighth when he filled the bases with two out by walking three hitters in a row and then pitched a single to Johnson.

That's how it went.

When the Nats weren't popping up or striking out, they were flying out to Myril Hoag. The Yankees centerfielder made nine putouts.

French Hurt As Reds Beat Cubs by 10-3

Star Hurler Breaks Three Fingers; Hit By Drive on Right Hand.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 28.—Cincinnati's Reds won their first game of the National League season today, a 10-to-3 decision over Chicago which also cost the Cubs the services of their ace left-hander, Larry French, for two months.

A blazing line drive from the bat of Ernie Lombardi, the Reds' big catcher, struck French on the right hand in the first inning, breaking three fingers and all but knocking the big southpaw off his feet. The ball bounced off his hand into right field, where first baseman Jim (Ripper) Collins flagged it.

French, obviously in great pain, ignored his injury to sprint to first base and take a quick throw from Collins, retiring Lombardi on a close play. He gamely attempted to remain in action, but was removed after Phil Weintraub singled, Alex Kampouris was safe on Stan Hack's error and Billy Myers singled. Charlie Root was sent in to relieve the injured hurler after five runs had crossed the plate.

The Reds sewed up the game in the hectic first inning, rushing over six runs. Weintraub contributed a homer and a single to a 14-hit assault on French, Root and Clay Bryant. Paul Derringer was rapped for 11 hits, including a homer by Augie Galan, but was tight with men on the Cubs leaving nine men stranded.

French was taken to a hospital where examination revealed three fractured fingers. He will be out of the game for at least six weeks.

Six Kentucky Derby Eligibles Due to Clash Today in Keeneland Stakes

Brooklyn, Billionaire To Compete

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Ky., April 28.—A post position in the Kentucky Derby their goal, six derby eligibles were listed tonight as starters in the $5,000 added Bluegrass Stakes tomorrow, feature event of Keeneland's closing card.

Headed by E. R. Bradley's Brooklyn and Billionaire, other 3-year-olds named to compete in the mile and an eighth test are Calumet Farm's Gosum and Galsun, Howard Maxwell's Fencing, trained by Earl Sande, and Hal Price Headley's Old Nassau.

The Bralley entries, expected to be slight favorites over the Calumet entry, will be out to redeem for their disappointing showing last week when they chased home Grey Gold, another Derby hopeful, in a purse race. Billionaire was second and his stablemate, third.

The Idle Hour colts will carry top impost of 123 pounds, 2 more than assigned to the rest of the field.

Although showers were predicted for tomorrow, the track was expected to be good and the largest crowd of the season was expected.

In addition to the prize money, a cup once presented to the breeder of the famous horse, Lexington, also will go to the winner.

The Blue Grass Stakes, once a historic Kentucky turf fixture, has not been run since about 1900.

Meanwhile, at Churchill Downs in Louisville, where a 19-day meeting opens Saturday, a week before the Derby, three more candidates for the May 8 classic arrived on the scene.

They were the Glen Riddle Farms' War Admiral, son of Man 'o War and winner of the Chesapeake Stakes; Foxcatcher Farms' Fairy Hill, victor in the Santa Anita Derby, and Court Scandal, a gray colt owned by Townsend B. Martin, Flamingo Stakes winner.

They came by train from Havre de Grace. They were reported to have stood the 24-hour trip "well."

What Horses Face on Gold Cup Course

With Bill Bennings

Selections at Pimlico.

Dear Al:

Racing returns to the ancient hilltop course and prospects point to the most successful session since the boom days. The Maryland Jockey Club has inserted some young blood in its official family and promises to make things hum. The high point of the session, as usual in the spring, is the Preakness to be run on May 15. If for no other reason, Pimlico deserves the support of Maryland race fans because it has the "tote" form of betting. It will be a pleasure for the bettors to get an accurate "line" from the electric boards after taking their doses of infrequent and out-of-line odds at Havre de Grace. I would like to take this time to clear up that Chevy Chase man thing. In the first edition, the Horatio Alger story appeared with a last line that read: "If you believe this, phone (a certain number) and ask for the wagon." The number I used was that of a certain institution which was swamped with calls soon after the paper was on the street. This resulted in the last line being deleted from the other editions the same day. Clocker Mike believes he has a good thing going on Saturday. He is tending to business now and we may have to take him seriously. I'll be passing it along.

BILL.

First race—Grape Thief, one that has worked well, raced greenly first out, but turned in a creditable performance at that. I expect improvement. Do It showed speed in that recent outing. Bred for an off track and is dangerous. Dark Flyer is better than those Graw races.

Third race—Happy Hazel is tossed in action here with only 101 pounds. She has been threatening to win a purse and this appears to be the right spot. Dona Dulcin is improved and will have to be caught. Fluffy Lee likes the tough going and is dangerous.

Fourth rates—Low Cuts has been working well but racing poorly. Meets a rather poor lot of maidens in this field and may take that long expected set of brackets. Ambrosia trailed last out, but is said to be a promising colt. Yomar to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Bright and Early has been rested and may be ready to defeat a sprint group of this good class. Finance has plenty of speed and will be at home if the track is off. Weston for the minor award.

Sixth race—Flying Feet gets in action here with light weight and with DeCamillis to do the riding, I'm going to string along. Moonpenny favors this track and may take the runner-up position. Italian Harry is cheap, but is a threat among these.

Seventh race—Miss Epe has worked well for this race and carries featherweight of 98 pounds. Count Tetrarch and Emvee to take care of the place and show. Toney Boy would be a threat in the mud.

Eighth race—Departed was allowed to drop too far out of it last out, but came with a rush in the stretch. Better handling may bring him the purse. Daffy, a winner at the Graw, is fit and ready. Sand Cloud is due some respect.

Best bet—Grape Thief.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 28.—Three of the best timber-toppers of 1937 rule as favorites in the Virginia Gold Cup, which will feature the annual meet sponsored by the Virginia Gold Cup Association at the Broadview estate of Alexander B. Hagner near here next Saturday.

Welbourne Jake, the Paul Mellon entry, probably will go to the post an overwhelming favorite to capture the 4-mile run over the most difficult of timber jumps. The Mellon horse has made three highly successful starts so far this season and is generally favored to continue the winning streak here.

Welbourne Jake started the season by capturing the Deep Run Cup, then the Middleburg Hunt Cup and only last week easily annexed the Maryland Hunt Cup.

Another of the strong contenders to take the blue ribbon fixture of the Old Dominion is Fugitive, owned by Mrs. George H. Bostwick, which won the Carolina Cup this year and finished second in the Gold Cup in 1936.

Ostend, another of the cofavorites, finished third in the Maryland Hunt Cup race, but seemed not in the best of condition. Many close observers feel that the Maryland Hunt Cup race was just what was needed to put the entry of Mrs. Frank M. Gould into wininng form for Saturday's encounter.

Lassitude II, owned by Col. W. W. Torr; Pimochio, entered by the Northwood Stables, and Gerard Smith's Sun Faun, the other entries in the Gold Cup, have not yet shown winning form this season, but any is capable of turning in an upset.

Several additional entries have increased the list of more than 60 horses which were entered for the six-race program last week. The new entries include James E. Ryan's Well Stepped, which will start in the Virginia Natoinal, bringing the field up to eight in that event.

A new entry in the Warrenton Hunt Cup race will be Crispin Ogleby's Super Ultra. The Warrenton now has 10 entries. Mrs. C. H. Tompkins' Ginger John, E. Q. McVitty's Palganado and George R. Slater's Court Time have been added to the Fauquier Plate.

Diffenbaugh, Spencer and Walper Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Thirty members of the Middle-Atlantic Professional Golfers Association, 10 to 1 shots each, will scramble for three qualifying places to the National P. C. A. over the 36-hole route of the water-logged Indian Spring course today.

With an accent on long hitters, due to the soggy fairways and necessary "all-carry" shots, the local siege guns, Leo Walper and Cliff Spencer have moved into the favorite positions along with George Diffenbaugh, host professional, who is familiar with every possible shot on the Four Corners layout.

Stretching to its full length of 6,621 yards, the Indian Spring course will be a full test for the Maryland, Virginia and District pros, who wil lattempt to win places in the May 24-30 event over the Pittsburgh Field Club in Aspinwall, Pa.

Course Is Slow.

Heavy rains over the past week have forced winter rules and any ball buried in the rough may be lifted without penalty. Holes two, five and seven on the first nine and 10, 11 and 15 on the back nine are the slowest drying holes and were dotted with small puddles yesterday.

Diffenbaugh, in the company of Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase pro; Leo Walper, Benny Loving and Darriel Napier, Cruikshank's assistant at the Country Club of Virginia, shot a 2 over par 73 yesterday, matching Barnett's card. Walper carded 74, Loving, 75, and Napier, 78.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, playing with Mel Shorey, who shot a 67 at Washington Golf and Country Club on Tuesday, played the back nine in 35. Shorey reported no score. Other competitors touring the course yesterday included Johnny Bass, Baltimore pro and likely qualifier on the basis of past performance at Indian Spring, who was "all over the course." Willie Schrieber and Charles Retschler played nine practice holes.

MacKenzie to Play.

Other competitors scheduled to play today include Roland MacKenzie, Al Tredor, Gene Larkin and Dave Thomson, local pros; Al Houghton, Old Point Comfort, Va.; Errie Ball, of Charlottesville; Jack Isaacs, Portsmouth; John Flattery, Alex Taylor, Carol McMasters, of the Baltimore group, and Leo Colliflower, of Frederick.

Wiffy Cox, Ralph Beach and Bobby Cruickshank will pass up the event. Beach and Cruickshank won berths in the trials held last year in Richmond, but lost in the first round. Walper, the other qualifier, went to the third round of the National play in Pinehurst.

Par for the Four Corners course is 71, but opinion yesterday found a pair of 73's as probably winners. A two-round total of 149 was good last year over the Country Club of Virginia layout.

Walper, who made the winter tour with the pros from Coast to Coast, is a logical favorite. Bob Barnett, who spent the winter in Florida and won the pro sweepstakes last week with a 69, will be a dark horse choice. Errie Ball and Benny Loving are the main threats from the Virginia clan.

No pairings or starting times were announced. Play begins at 9 a. m. in threesomes.

Jack Torrance Finally Levels in Fight With Simon

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Annapolis, Md., April 28.—University of Maryland batsmen slugged the Naval Academy's pitching staff this afternoon, scoring runs by batches in four innings and finishing the game with the score standing at 16 to 4 in the visitors' favor.

Fred McKay, Jerry Bruckel, Fletcher Hale and Joe Eliot took their turns on the Navy slab, while George Wood pitched nine innings for the Marylanders, and though hit safely eight times, kept them well scattered with his slow curves.

The Navy started the run-making by scoring two in the second session when Mann hit safely, McGuinness was passed and Adair scored the two with a cracking double to left center.

Charlottesville, Va., April 28.—Capt. "Bud" Abbitt, Virginia's giant right-hander, who held the Navy to one hit last Saturday was effective for five innings today, but was batted from the box in the sixth frame, giving William and Mary a 7-to-3 victory, making it two straight for the Indians.

Edmunds led with the stick for the Cavaliers, getting three hits, including a double. Sergeant also contributed a double and single.

Stars Guests At Father-Son Frolic Tonight

The fourteenth father-son banquet of the Washington Hebrew Congregation Brotherhood will be held tonight at the Hotel Mayflower amid the most glittering array of sports celebrities in the history of the annual frolic.

Jewish lads of the Capital, including a host of orphans, will be the guests of members of the brotherhood who have provided a monster show to follow the dinner.

At the honored guests' table will be the outstanding stars of the Washington and New York baseball teams following custom. Headline acts from various Washington theater stages will be a part of the program and radio stars of the Capital will attend in force.

Chairman Sydney Rust of the banquet committe has also arranged a showing of special animated cartoons for the delight of the kiddies. The winner of an essay contest which has as its theme "What the Father-Son Banquet Means to Me," will be announced.

Straiges, Terranova to Fight Here Monday

Eddie Straiges, popular Camden, N. J., lightweight, will return to the wars here at Turner's Arena Monday night against the toughest opposition he has yet faced in the District. Eddie's opponent will be Frankie Terranova, a New York Italian, who recently knocked out Lew Feldman.

On the Air Today

Added to the broadcasts from England, scheduled by the networks for May 12, the day of the coronation, is one to be known as "The Empire's Homage." Within a few hours after his coronation, George VI will audibly receive the homage of all the British peoples throughout the world and by means of radio will address them. That means, of course, that American listeners can peek through the radio keyhole and hear, too.

The exchange, for it is to be an occasion in which the monarch receives as well as gives greetings—will present the voices of Prime Minister Baldwin, from London; Viceroy of India, from India; and high officials of nearly all units of the empire speaking from London or governmental seats of their countries over the world.

This program will be heard in the United States at about 3 in the afternoon.

Corn Scarcity Jumps Prices 4 Cents Higher

May Delivery Closes at $1.29¾; Other Grains Also Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 28.—Aiming straight for the zenith the second day in succession, corn prices kited today about the extreme immediate possible limit of 4 cents a bushel. Empty elevators here was the basis of the rise.

One result of continued sensational jumps of corn values was to help rally other grains from sharp downturns that had accompanied breaks in prices of securities, and which had followed reports of trans-Atlantic financial difficulties based, apparently, to a great extent on suspension of a single Paris banking house.

At the close corn futures were ranging irregularly from ¾ of a cent lower to 3 cents higher than yesterday's finish, May $1.29¾@1.30⅛, July $1.18⅛@1.18¼, September $1.08½@1.08¾; wheat ⅛ to 1 cent advanced, May $1.29@1.29⅛, July $1.17¼@1.17⅜, September $1.14⅞@1.15; oats ½ off to ½ up, May 49¼@50, and rye showing ½@2½ bulge, May $1.10½. Provisions closed 2 cents to 10 cents dearer.

Banker Warns Against Buying By Installment

Maj. Angas Sees Long Period of Prosperity for This Country.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—A sharp warning against installment buying, which is increasing, was sounded today by Carl M. Spencer, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks.

Addressing the opening session of the association's annual conference, Spencer, who is head of the Home Savings Bank, Boston, said, "installment selling is on the increase, backed by the old allurements: 'Your old car as a down payment'—'enjoy your radio while you pay for it'—'travel and pay the bill on easy terms after you get home.'

"The army of patient payers is on the march again," he said, suggesting the prospective buyer should ask himself: "'Do I need it; can I afford it.'"

Maj. L. L. B. Angas, British stock-market letter writer, predicted "high prosperity for may years in America, at a level of activity rivaling, and indeed eventually exceeding, that of 1929."

"Whether you like it or not, money management in fact is here," he added. Depression he termed "the breeding ground of Bolshevism" and said "a cure for the business cycle is essential."

Capital and Labor.

The conference also heard a plea for "fair play" between capital and labor in the railroad field. An address, prepared for delivery by George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks and chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' Association, was read by D. B. Robertson, president, Locomotive Firemen and Engineers.

It is necessary for management to adopt a more enlightened attitude toward employes' representatives, "just as it is imperative that the leadership of labor recognizes its responsibilities toward industry," the message said.

Henry Bruere, president of the Bowery Savings Bank, New York, told conferees that encouraging developments make the railroad situation the "best in years."

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Slump to Year's Lowest Levels Led By Drop in Steel Shares.

New York, April 28.—Stocks had a bad relapse and on the largest volume in seven weeks sank to new low levels for the year, with declines running to 8 or 9 points in common issues. Turnover was around 2,750,000 shares. Government bonds were fairly firm and commodities, aside from a bad break in rubber, were not especially heavy. July wheat closed an eighth of a cent higher at 117¼ cents a bushel.

Wall Street largely gave up trying to find specific reasons for the fresh break in stocks. It considered valid most of the old excuses, and the new ones brought up seemed either too superficial or too special in their application to account for broad market movements. Re-statement of the Government's policy to attack price advances through indictment of corporations engaged in production or distribution of the commodities concerned tasted unpleasantly, but at least it was no new factor.

Against Price Fixing.

President Roosevelt's parting warning that prices are beginning to lift living costs too rapidly was of a different color. While it may have been interpreted by some readers (it was given in a letter from the President to the Vice President apropos the Tydings-Miller price lifting and price freezing bill) as indicating a warning that Federal forces would be directed toward bringing down prices, that does not seem to be a satisfactory reading. What the President now wishes to avoid is an inflationary price movement that would not only wipe out all the gains of labor in securing higher wages but that would in itself insure another bad setback in business.

It is still an open question whether, having set up and put into motion so much price lifting machinery, the thing can now be stopped, short of bringing on an immediate business depression, but at least the President now stands on firm economic ground. Taken at face value his objections to the Tydings bill, on the grounds that it would give the trade power to fix resale prices, are valid, although they are directly at variance with the underlying principles of the unlamented and vicious NRA. The President in turning against price fixing is at last on the right road, and his new position, if firmly held, cannot help but have a bullish effect in long run.

Flurry in Francs.

A flurry in francs was precipitated by the statement of the French finance minister that the Treasury was in good shape, that the stabilization fund needed no money and had plenty and that there were no resignations from the management of the fund pending. The intention of the French government to put off the new dealist policies most strenuously objected to by conservatives was a bull point on francs and the combined influence of these developments was to bring about some heavy short covering by exchange speculators. So great was the demand for spot francs at times that the French fund had to sell francs and buy foreign exchange, further strengthening its own position. The rise in francs at one time approximated 3 points. Sterling was less urgently bid for and moved most of the day over a narrow fractional range.

Midweek trade news was a shade less favorable in steel, in which industry the unchanged prices for third quarter have caused, according to the Iron Age, a slackening of orders and some postponement of deliveries. The steel market apparently has turned from a sellers' to a buyers' affair; but while steel scrap prices have weakened, the pig iron and coke markets continue strong.

Too Much Optimism.

Freight traffic last week continued to increase more than seasonably and car loadings reached a new top for the year, about 1 per cent above the previous week and 13.8 per cent over the corresponding period of a year ago. However, the stock market plainly is not now reflecting current business, but rather is attempting to discount what it thinks may lie in store. Prices apparently had shown too much optimism over the outlook, not so much because a bad setback is coming as because too much of a rise was expected.

Liquidation of stocks was vigorous from the start and the ticker fell behind frequently. The usual midday lull occurred, but it brought no rally of consequence, and most stocks sold at their worst prices towards the close. The rally yesterday was regarded as largely a short covering affair, and it merely postponed extensive selling to meet margin calls. Withdrawal of foreign funds also continued, but nerves in the London market seemed to be a little steadier.

Hard to Guess.

York Telephone preferred stock, issued in 1922, originally had about 70,000 stockholders, reduced at this time to around 30,000. The stock was called today at 110. Some buyers were unlucky enough to pay 119 for it on the curb yesterday, in sharp contrast to the experience of those who sold New York Steam in the 20 to 30 range, only to learn that Consolidated Edison was paying up to 33 for it.

Prices.

The Aluminum Co. monopoly apparently has brought down the price from $100 a pound, in 1855, to 20 cents a pound; but the Government is in a hurry to get lower prices. No one would have suspected that in the spring of 1933.

Steel Activity Eases as Price Schedule Holds

Pig Iron and Coke Are Strong, but Scrap Steel Declines.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 28.—An easier situation prevails in the steel market, following removal of the principal incentive for forward buying by announcement of a continuation of present prices through the third quarter, Iron Age said today in its review of the industry.

"Deliveries on a few products have shortened," the review said, "chiefly because some buyers who entered orders for shipment during second quarter to escape a possible price advance July 1 have asked mills to defer processing some tonnage to the third quarter. If this tendency spreads, a leveling-off process in production may be expected, though it is doubted that any marked downtrend will occur owing to present heavy backlogs and pending business of a definite character.

"Some steel companies have booked a large volume of business for the third quarter, most of this having been taken prior to announcement of prices. Others that refrained from booking beyond the second quarter are now actively soliciting business.

"In contrast with strength in pig iron and coke, scrap has grown weaker, with declines of $1.50 at Pittsburgh and 75 cents at Chicago in the heavy melting grade, bringing the Iron Age scrap composite down to $20, the third consecutive weekly decline.

"Flood waters at Pittsburg and Wheeling have caused the shutting down of blast furnaces and steel-making furnaces, bringing the production rate for the country down to 90½ per cent."

Curb Prices Fall With 'Big Board'

New York, April 28 (AP).—Pronounced weakness in the stock exchange list quickly communicated itself to the curb market today and brought the latter its most severe decline in some time. Washington developments which were thought to have started selling on the big board had an equally depressing effect on the general run of curb issues. Utilities responded bearishly to the forecast of plans for a country-wide TVA.

Transactions totaled 579,000 shares compared with 373,000 yesterday.

Foreign Markets.

London, April 28 (AP).—Stock exchange traders were favorably impressed by Chancellor Chamberlain's explanation regarding the new excess profits tax. Prices were firm most of the day although some issues eased at the close in absence of supporting orders. Industrials were in good demand, especially distilling, steel and chipping shares. Oils and rubbers moved higher while the mining group was mixed. Transatlantics and German bonds closed fractionally lower.

Paris—The trend of the bourse today was mixed, rentes closed 10 centimes lower to 35 higher and Bank of France rose 85 francs. Royal Dutch lost 82 francs and Suez Canal shares declined 250 francs.

Liverpool—Wheat futures, after advancing almost two pence, reacted on lower world commodity markets and weakness in the New York stock prices. Quotations were ¾d to 1¾d lower at the close. Cotton futures lost 6 to 8 points on the day due to outstanding absence of support. Bombay and local selling also influenced prices.

Pact May End Tire Workers' 8-Week Strike

Firestone, Spokesmen of 10,000 Agree; Union to Vote Today.

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, April 28.—The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. announced today an agreement had been reached with representatives of the United Rubber Workers of America to end the eight-week strike of 10,000 employes at the company's plants here.

The statement was issued following a meeting of company officials and union representatives which lasted nearly three hours. Terms of the agreement were not made public. It was reported it would be presented to members of the union for a vote tomorrow.

The union, in its negotiations, has demanded abolition of the Firestone employe representative conference and the exclusive right of collective bargaining for all plant employes. The Rubber Workers' Union is an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Four Rail Groups Unite.

San Francisco, April 28 (AP).—Four powerful railroad brotherhoods have banded together and plan to "fight the railroads in this country" for higher wages, G. W. Laughlin, union official, announced today.

The announcement was made before President Roosevelt's Federal Mediation Board, hearing complaints of two junior brotherhoods against the Southern Pacific Co.

Trailer Peace Efforts Fail.

Connersville, Ind., April 28 (AP).—A truce halted hostilities today between two warring union factions at the Rex Manufacturing Co.'s plant, scene of rioting last night in which three persons were injured, but peacemakers' efforts to settle the dispute apparently got nowhere.

Elmer Davis, U. A. W. A. organizer, said the complaint would charge the company with intimidation of the union's members in violation of the Wagner act.

First Bargaining Vote Held.

Detroit, April 28 (AP).—The first election to determine whether the United Automobile Workers of America should represent employes of a major automobile producer in collective bargaining sent 14,800 Packard Motor Car Co. workers to voting booths today and tonight. Representatives of the National Labor Relations Board supervised the balloting.

In a downtown courtroom, meanwhile, 120 sit-down strikers who held the Yale & Towne Manufacturing plant here for more than a month until they were forcibly evicted after a half-hour battle with deputies April 14, heard Circuit Court Judge Arthur Webster convict them of contempt of court.

Judge Webster imposed the maximum penalty of 30 days in jail and $250 fines on George Edwards, U. A. W. A. organizer, and Peter P. Sedler, and ordered Bruce Wilson and George Cicich to jail for ten days. He deferred sentence of other defendants until July 15 and said they might receive suspended terms at that time. None of those sentenced was a Yale & Towne employe.

N. Y. Police Hunt Clews In Stabbing of Judge

New York, April 28 (AP).—Municipal Court Justice John F. O'Neil rallied slightly tonight while police vainly continued their search for clews to the assailant who yesterday stabbed him in the back as he stood waiting for a bus.

Discovery of a sharpened screwdriver shaft in a sewer near the scene of the attack led police to believe they had found the weapon. Judicial records were checked in an effort to discover a possible revenge motive.

Il Duce Inaugurates 'Hollywood' for Italy

Rome, April 28 (AP).—Premier Benito Mussolini inaugurated today the "Italian Hollywood" he has built on the outskirts of Rome.

In a modern motion-picture city, equipped with all the most modern devices, Il Duce hopes to see an Italian movie art flower as a serious competitor for foreign productions. His interest is due partly to his frequently acknowledged appreciation of motion pictures as an important propaganda medium.

Basques Make Fort of Church, Halt Mola's Men

Rain prevented insurgent air bombers from aiding their infantry, but artillery was brought up to blast the desperate Basques out of their fortified buildings.

Dispatches reaching London from Bilbao reported the Basques had evacuated Durango in good order at 6 p. m. Wednesday, taking their military stores with them. Other Spanish government reports reaching Hendaye late Wednesday night declared the key city still was in the hands of the Basques, who were putting up a desperate resistance.

In Bilbao there was surface gaiety. The populace seemed unaware that the enemy was at hand, although the city was swelled to 400,000 population by refugees from surrounding villages captured by insurgents.

The picture houses and the dance halls were crowded. Militiamen and women filled the shops. Soldiers and their girls thronged promenades. But authorities quietly considered evacuation of women and children and preparation to withstand siege. The provincial council at Santander, 47 miles westward, offered haven in the event of evacuation.

Could Join Madrid Siege.

(In London, Wilfred Roberts, Laborite member of the House of Commons, announced the British navy will begin evacuation of Bilbao's civil population probably within two days.)

Capture of Bilbao would permit the northern insurgent army to turn southward quickly and aid the drive against Madrid.

Mola led the victorious drive against San Sebastian and Irun. He directed part of his army in the maneuvers into the Guadarrama mountains, 52 miles northwest of Madrid. He is the guiding force of the present Bilbao campaign.

An insurgent communique said the southernmost column fought in the Durango sector, 16 miles southeast of Bilbao. The northern column drove against Guernica, ancient Basque capital, where 800 died Monday in aerial raids which the Basques charged were directed by an insurgent "German-Italian staff." The central column held the Marquina sector, 20 miles east of Bilbao.

The three columns captured ten small towns in today's advance, including Marquina, the insurgents said.

Britain to Aid Evacuation.

London, April 28 (AP).—The British navy will begin evacuation of Bilbao's civil population probably within two days, Wilfred Roberts, Laborite member of the House of Commons, announced tonight.

Refugees will be taken from the northern Spanish port, besieged by Spanish insurgents under Gen. Emilio Mola, to St. Jean de Luz, France.

Roberts, who said he made the announcement with the approval of the British foreign office, declared:

"There is a feeling of concern at the ghastly possibilities for 500,000 people, including some 100,000 children, should Mola carry out his threat completely to destroy Bilbao as was done yesterday in Guernica."

Roberts' reference to the destruction of Guernica, burned Monday, followed protests in the House of Commons by Laborites and Liberals against "massacre and terrorism" in the city.

Drive Just Started, Is Warning Issued By Press.

leading figure in a secret three-week trial, Chaplain Joseph Rossaint, of the Duesseldorf youth group, received an 11-year sentence and loss of civil rights for ten years.

Chaplain Franz Steber, leader of the Catholic Young Men's Association, drew five years' imprisonment and five years' loss of civil rights. Chaplain Karl Kremer zu Remscheid must serve 18 months. A fourth defendant, Herman Juelich, got two years and loss of civil rights for a similar period.

The Chaplains Rossaint and Steber and Juelich were sentenced for "preparation of highly treasonable action under aggravating circumstances." The other defendant was accused of "aiding in the preparation of treasonable activities."

Chaplain Jacob Clemens, secretary of the Catholic Young Men's Association, and two other defendants were acquitted.

At Coblenz, lay Brother Eugen, of the Montabaurer Brothers of Mercy, was sentenced to 30 months in prison and three years' loss of civil rights on an immorality charge. Two others were acquitted.

Two Franciscan brothers received prison sentences at Coblenz. Brother Ignatiets, 76, of the Waldbreitbach Monastery, was sentenced to 18 months on an immorality charge that published reports said he confessed. Brother Desiderius, 37, received a 30-month sentence on similar charges.

Foreign observers believed the Catholic trials were an attempt by the government to substantiate its convention the church had violated the 1933 German-Vatican concordat, in which the church agreed to limit itself to religious education and to leave political activity to the state.

William Black, 97, Ex-Indian Fighter, Dies

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, April 28 (Canadian Press).—William Black, 97, who fought with "Buffalo Bill" Cody, "Wild Bill" Hickok, Kit Carson and other frontiersmen, died here yesterday. A native of Huntington County, Quebec, he went to Chicago in 1859 but subsequently traveled farther West, joining frontier fighters in Indian wars.

Jury in Pierce Blackmail Case Fails to Agree After 10 Hours

After 10 hours deliberation the jury weighing the fate of Mrs. Mary Krieger, former Oklahoma school teacher, and Samuel Leighton Frooks, New York lawyer, was locked up last night.

The jurors will resume deliberations today. The case went to the jury at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and the members were locked up on orders of Trial Justice F. Dickinson Letts at 11 o'clock last night.

Frooks, who several years ago was a candidate-at-large for the House of Representatives from New York, and Mrs. Krieger are charged with having conspired to blackmail Carroll Pierce, former president of the Citizens National Bank of Alexandria. They also are charged with having actually blackmailed the banker, who died several weeks prior to the trial.

William R. Berkson, attorney for Brooks, made an impassioned plea to the jury to acquit the defendants. He claimed the prosecution had produced no witnesses to show that threats were made to reveal alleged intimacies between Mrs. Krieger and Pierce. The basis of Mrs. Krieger's claim against the banker was that he had promised her a lifetime job in the bank at $175 a month. She sought redress when the job was not forthcoming, and employed Frooks to present a claim for breach of contract.

He charged Government witnesses with taking part in a scheme to aid Pierce in "squirming out of a valid contract" for employment of Mrs. Krieger.

Col. Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney, declared the pair had schemed to get $2,500 from the banker by threatening to "drag out in court" the alleged "illicit relations" which the prosecution charged existed between Mrs. Krieger and Pierce.

Roger Robb, assistant U. S. attorney, told the jury Mrs. Krieger was a "blood sucker" who schemed with Frooks, "a slimy blackmailer," to extort money.
